

How to stop seeking validation from others

MIDSTER

LIFE

DO YOU KNOW YOUR WORTH?

While external validation can be beneficial in many ways, it is vital for individuals to also develop a sense of self-worth and self-validation from within. Here are some steps you can take to start validating yourself.

UNDERSTAND YOUR BELIEFS AND VALUES

Reflect on your values and beliefs, and understand what is important to you. With a clear sense of values you will be able to make decisions that align with them and be more confident in your choices.

PRACTICE SELF-COMPASSION

Be gentle with yourself when you make mistakes, and don't judge yourself too harshly. Remember that everyone makes mistakes and has flaws, and that's okay.

FOCUS ON YOUR STRENGTHS

Acknowledge your strengths and accomplishments, and focus on what you do well. Celebrate your successes and recognize the positive things about yourself.

TRUST YOURSELF

Trust your judgment and decisions, and don't second-guess yourself. You are capable of making good decisions and you don't need the approval of others to make them.

SET BOUNDARIES

Learn to set boundaries with others and not let their opinions and expectations dictate your life. Be clear about what you need and want, and communicate it assertively.

BE PATIENT

Learning to validate yourself is a process that takes time and effort. Be patient with yourself, and continue to practice self-compassion and self-validation until it becomes a habit.

SEEK SUPPORT

Talk to a trusted friend, family member, or therapist about your struggles with seeking validation from others. They can provide you with support and encouragement as you work to validate yourself.
