Transitional Justice in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union Lavinia Stan, 2009-01-13. During the last two decades the countries of Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union have attempted to address the numerous human rights abuses that characterized the decades of communist rule. This book examines the main processes of transitional justice that permitted societies in those countries to come to terms with their recent past. It explores lustration, the banning of communist officials and secret political police officers and informers from post communist political life, ordinary citizens' access to the remaining archives compiled on them by the communist secret police, as well as trials and court proceedings launched against former communist officials and secret agents for their human rights trespasses. Individual chapters explore the progress of transitional justice in Germany, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Poland, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Albania, Slovenia and the successor states of the former Soviet Union. The chapters explain why different countries have employed different models to come to terms with their communist past, assess each country's relative successes and failures and probe the efficacy of country specific legislation to attain the transitional justice goals for which it was developed. The book draws together the country cases into a comprehensive comparative analysis of the determinants of post communist transitional justice that will be relevant not only to scholars of post communist transition but also to anyone interested in transitional justice in other contexts.

Europeanization of Environmental Policies and their Limitations Arpad Todor, Florența Elena Helepciuc, 2021-05-13. This book offers a window into the mechanisms that drive events when countries with poor track records in environmental protection and low administrative capacity join an organisation with ambitious environmental regulatory regimes which include some of the highest environmental protection standards in the world. This book examines the institutional building capacity in Romania after two decades of the development of the EU's environmental policy on elaboration, transposition, implementation, monitoring and institutional building. The book examines how Romania has fared as one of the least environmentally friendly EU member states and poses the following questions: What are the limits of Europeanisation in the area of public policies? What is the reason why despite the overwhelming public interest in environmental issues and widespread agreement that urgent action to protect the environment and prevent catastrophic climate change are paramount, the pace of achieving the goals remains slow? Why do policies fail? This book brings together several case studies focusing on the evolution of environmental policies in Romania over the last twenty years, with a special focus on the post accession period 2007 onwards. The book provides an analysis of policies where progress is less than satisfactory and examines why this is the case.

Focus on Romania Dorel Ailenei, Anca Dachin, C?t?lin Huidumac-Petrescu, Mariana Iovi?u, Marius-Corneliu Marina?, Christina Marta Suciuc, 2015 What Who are we After the Transition is not only an expression fit for a book title but also a tense issue whose rational solutions are slow in coming amid the vibrating emotion for the life changing consistency differential The prospects of long processes cover a life expectancy but in Romania where generations of sacrifice succeeded one after another time does not have enough patience to run smoothly The assessment made in this book is an attempt at decoding what has been done by the last generation i e the transitional generation from communism to capitalism The authors reunited under the Research and Economic Analysis Centre part of the Department of Economics and Economic Policies from the Faculty of Theoretical and Applied Economics which is part of the Bucharest University of Economics In their analyses the authors refer to the mental milestones of Romanian society that was built on frail social slopes The different parts of Romanian society do not always agree with each other between what we are and what we stand for as a people or as nation between what we can and what we do between what we want and what we have The topics referred to herein come with a bit of historical background but they are approached starting with the need to explain why things happened this way and why it is not as we expected from the standpoint of higher individual and societal amenities The authors were driven by the moral burden to identify a progress generating formula even under tough external constraints stemming from any arrangement conditionality or commitment undertaken by an open economy country with Western geostrategic options

Building Trust and Democracy Cynthia M. Horne,2017-04-28 This volume explores the effects of transitional justice measures on trust building and democratization across twelve countries in Central and Eastern Europe and parts of the Former Soviet Union over the period 19892012 The author argues that transitional justice measures have a differentiated impact on political and social trust building supporting some aspects of political trust and undermining other aspects of social trust Moreover the structure scope timing and implementation of transitional justice measures condition outcomes More expansive and compulsory institutional change mechanisms register the largest effects with limited and voluntary change mechanisms having a diminished effect and more informal and largely symbolic measures having the most attenuated effect These differentiated and conditional effects are also evident with respect to transition goals like supporting democratic consolidation and reducing corruption since these goals respond differently to the mixtures of institutional and symbolic reforms found in transitional justice programs The author develops an original transitional justice typology in order to test hypotheses linking trust building and transitional justice across twelve cases in the post communist region The resulting new datasets allow for a quantitative examination of the relationship between different types of transitional justice programs and a range of possible state building and societal reconciliation goals including political trust building social trust building democratization the strengthening of civil society the promotion of government effectiveness and the reduction of corruption Comparative case studies of four transitional justice programs Hungary Romania Poland and Bulgariadraw on field work primary and historical documents and interview materials to explicate trust building dynamics with particular attention to regime complicity challenges historical memory issues and communist legacies Oxford Studies in Democratization is a series for scholars and students of comparative politics and related disciplines Volumes concentrate on the comparative study of the democratization process that accompanied the decline and termination of the cold war The geographical focus of the series is primarily Latin America the Caribbean Southern and Eastern Europe and relevant experiences in Africa and Asia The series editor is Laurence Whitehead Senior Research Fellow Nuffield College University of Oxford

Romania, Moving Toward NATO and the E.U. United States. Congress. Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe,2004 Fighting Corruption in Eastern Europe Diana Schmidt-Pfister,Holger Moroff,2013-09-13 Anti corruption programmes projects and campaigns have come to constitute an essential aspect of good governance promotion over the last two decades The post communist countries in Eastern Europe have presented one of the first key targets of transnational anti corruption efforts and indeed most of these countries have shown an impressive record of respective measures Yet path breaking institutional and policy developments have not set in before the mid 2000s both at the international level and in most Eastern European countries Are these the beginnings of a mutually synergetic success story In order to answer this question we need to better understand the complex interplay between the international and domestic domains in this policy field and geographic region This book provides in depth and comparative insights about this interplay with a particular focus on the involvement of domestic social movements governmental political machines and international legal mechanisms We find that on all three levels of analysis political and material interests of relevant actors are complemented and at times contradicted by normative claims Moreover at the interfaces of the three levels coincidental and spontaneous developments have largely outweighed systematic implementation and coordination of appropriate anti corruption strategies This book is based on a special issue of Global Crime Focus on International & Comparative Librarianship ,1994
