

TS100 Transponder

Pilot Guide

Overview

The TrimLine TS100 Transponder operates with the Air Traffic Control Radar Beacon System (ATCRBS). The transponder receives interrogations from a ground-based secondary radar transmitter and transmits the aircraft's identification to the Air Traffic Control Center via Mode A transmissions. If the aircraft is equipped with an altitude encoder, the transponder can also transmit Mode C altitude information. The TS100 also has a one-touch automatic VFR squawk capability.

Front Panel

The user interface of the TS100 transponder includes the display window, a rotary mode select switch with press for IDENT, a rotary code tuning knob with press to self-test, and two push-button keys.

The active code is displayed on the left side of the display window and the standby code is displayed on the right side. The transponder displays a "T" (reply indicator) to the right of the active code when it responds to an interrogation from a ground station indicating that the aircraft is being seen on radar. The "T" also verifies proper operation when using the self-test feature.
