The Wto And Sustainable Development:

Sustainable Development in World Trade Law Markus W. Gehring, Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger, 2005-01-01 In Johannesburg at the World Summit on Sustainable Development in 2002 over one hundred and eighty states assumed a collective responsibility to advance and strengthen the interdependent and mutually reinforcing pillars of sustainable development economic development social development an environmental protection at the local national regional and global levels This remarkable collection of papers sponsored by the Centre for International Sustainable Development Law CISDL demonstrates that sustainable development serves as a unifying concept with the potential to facilitate much needed respect for international law and timely implementation of diverse and overlapping international commitments It builds on the substance of a rich and complex debate at the intersections among economic social and environmental law bringing together a broad cross section of viewpoints and voices The authors review recent developments in WTO discussions and negotiations and in the recent decisions of the WTO Appellate Body from a sustainable development law perspective They also survey relevant new developments in trade and economic agreements at regional inter regional and bi lateral levels The various essays focus on sustainable development aspects of key issues in recent trade negotiations such as the Singapore Issues investment competition trade facilitation and government procurement intellectual property rights investment arbitration and the linkage between the WTO and multilateral environmental accords MEAand s Among the specific topics covered are the following Emerging areas of law and policy in trade and sustainable development The underlying development agendas in global trade law negotiations Cooperation and potential negotiation on international competition law Sustainable development aspects of intellectual property rights negotiations Overlaps between multilateral environmental accords MEAand s and the WTO Recent developments in WTO dispute settlement procedures and proceedings Human rights and environmental opportunities from trade liberalisation and increased market acces Human rights and environment impact assessment techniques used to analyse trade agreements Recent developments in bi lateral and regional trade agreements Trade investment and competition law practitioners and negotiators in developed and developing countries will find this book of great value as will development and environment law professionals with responsibility for trade and WTO law related matters With rich contributions from leading trade law practitioners academics and WTO panel and appellate body roster members Sustainable Developments in World Trade Law offers a constructive timely and accessible expert analysis of recent discussions and advances in the field providing an integrated and essential guide to some of the most important issues in international economic law today The WTO and Sustainable Development Gary P. Sampson, 2005-01-01 The WTO, Agriculture and Sustainable Development Heinrich Wohlmeyer, Theodor Quendler, 2017-09-08 Despite the Doha declaration of November 2001 the failure to start a new round of global trade negotiations at Seattle in December 1999 and the hostility of protesters to the trade liberalization process and growing global economic and social disparities was a wake up call for the World Trade Organisation WTO The ambitious goal of this ground breaking book is to identify the strengths and weaknesses of liberalized world trade in particular in the agricultural sector and to investigate to what extent the current WTO agreements provide the necessary fail safe devices to react to trade related negative impacts on sustainability environmental protection and food security The background and interrelationship between the WTO the tenets of sustainable development and the unique features of the agriculture and forestry sectors are explored and conclusions regarding the deficits of the world trade system and its conflicts with basic societal goals such as sustainability are drawn Agriculture and forestry have a particular affinity with what the authors call strong sustainability and are to be among the major agenda items in forthcoming WTO negotiations The book proposes that sustainable agricultural production techniques such as integrated and organic farming provide a series of related services to community and environment which could be severely prejudiced by wholesale trade liberalization and the imposition of the large scale production methods of the mega trade giants of the USA and Europe And yet the concept of sustainability is referred to only tangentially in the existing WTO agenda The WTO Agriculture and Sustainable Development argues that without a formal recognition of this failing the premise that free trade is inherently advantageous for all countries is a falsehood Further unfettered liberalization is unsustainable and a social and environmental multilateral framework must be agreed to reinterpret or adapt a host of WTO regulations that are at odds with sustainable development The core problem is that under the current system import duties can only be differentiated by direct goods and services and not by their means of production sustainable or otherwise Therefore a range of environmental policy measures in the agricultural sector such as the consideration of product life cycles the internalization of external costs and a coupling of trade liberalization with ecological obligations are proposed by the authors In addition they argue that unsustainable economic short termism must be curbed and the use of the stick of trade sanctions and the carrot of financial benefits for good environmental performance be permitted to promote sustainable agricultural practices This book will contribute greatly in addressing the lack of basic theoretical arguments at the intersection between trade and sustainable development a failing that has already been bemoaned by trade policy makers It is highly recommended reading for all those involved or interested in the WTO negotiations whether from multilateral organizations governments industry or civil society

The World Trade Organisation, Agriculture and Sustainable Development Heinrich Wohlmeyer, Theodor Quendler, 2002 Identifies the strengths and weaknesses of liberalized world trade in particular in the agricultural sector and investigates to which extent the current WTO agreements provide the devices to react to trade related negative impacts on sustainability environmental protection and food security

Mainstreaming Trade to Attain the Sustainable Development Goals

World Tourism Organization, World Trade Organization WTO, 2018-05-29 The WTO is central to achieving the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and its Sustainable Development Goals SDGs which set targets to be achieved by 2030 in areas such as poverty reduction health education and the environment The SDGs put significant emphasis on the role that trade plays in promoting sustainable development and recognize the contribution that the WTO can make to the 2030 Agenda By delivering and implementing trade reforms which are pro growth and pro development and by continuing to foster stable predictable and equitable trading relations across the world the WTO will play an important role in delivering the Sustainable Development Goals just as it did with the Millennium Development Goals before them This report identifies steps which would help to ensure that international trade contributes to accelerating progress in achieving the SDGs 1 Mainstream trade into national and sector strategies to achieve the SDGs 2 Strengthen the multilateral trading system so that it can continue supporting inclusive growth jobs and poverty reduction 3 Continue reducing trade costs including through full implementation of the WTO s Trade Facilitation Agreement 4 Build supply side capacity and trade related infrastructure in developing countries and LDCs 5 Focus on export diversification and value addition 6 Enhance the services sector 7 Apply flexible rules of origin to increase utilization of preference schemes 8 Ensure that non tariff measures do not become barriers to trade 9 Make e commerce a force for inclusion 10 Support micro small and medium sized enterprises to engage in international trade

Trade in the Service of Sustainable Development Olivier De Schutter, 2015-09-10 In the Bretton Woods era trade liberalization the improvement of labour rights and working conditions and the strengthening of environmental policies were seen as mutually supportive But is this always true Can we continue to pretend to protect the rights of workers and to improve environmental protection particularly through climate change mitigation strategies within an agenda focused on trade liberalization Is it credible to pursue trade policies that aim to expand the volumes of trade without linking such policies to labour and environmental standards seen as non trade concerns This book asks these questions offering a detailed analysis of whether linkage is desirable and legally acceptable under the disciplines of the World Trade Organization WTO It concludes that trade can work for sustainable development but only if we see it as a means for social and environmental progress including climate change mitigation and if we avoid fetishizing it as an end to be pursued for its own sake

Sustainable Development As a Principle of International Law Christina Voigt, 2009 This volume provides a framework for the doctrinal foundation of sustainable development as a principle of integration in international law The work departs from the fragmented nature of the international legal system a system that lacks integrative principles for creating coherent relations between for example the international trade regime of the WTO and multilateral environmental agreements The specific focus is on a legal analysis of potential normative conflicts between climate measures as regulated by the UNFCCC and the Kyoto Protocol in particular the flexibility instruments of international emissions trading and the Clean Development Mechanism and the rules of the WTO Attention is then given to the application of sustainable development as a principle of integration in relation to these conflicts The book takes on several important timely and demanding tasks related to the urgent global challenge of climate change and the capacity of international law to deal with complex and multifaceted issues It addresses in particular a The relations between various international legal regimes especially between international trade law and climate law a The legal status of sustainable development as a principle of international law and a The analysis of interpretative methods and of principles that may serve to address conflicts between rules pertaining to different legal regimes Here integration as part of legal reasoning becomes particularly relevant

Agricultural Subsidies in the WTO Green Box Ricardo Meléndez-Ortiz, Christophe Bellmann, Jonathan Hepburn, 2009-12-03 Do the World Trade Organization's rules on green box farm subsidies allow both rich and poor countries to achieve important goals such as food security or do they worsen poverty distort trade and harm the environment Current WTO requirements set no ceiling on the amount of green box subsidies that governments can provide on the basis that these payments cause only minimal trade distortion Governments are thus increasingly shifting their subsidy spending into this category as they come under pressure to reduce subsidies that are more directly linked to production However growing evidence nonetheless suggests that green box payments can affect production and trade harm farmers in developing countries and cause environmental damage By bringing together new research and critical thinking this book examines the relationship between green box subsidies and the achievement of sustainable development goals and explores options for future reform

Transforming World Trade and Investment Law for Sustainable Development Ernst-Ulrich Petersmann, 2022-03-24 Transforming World Trade and Investment Law for Sustainable Development explains why the 2030 UN Sustainable Development Agenda for Transforming our World aimed at realizing universal human rights and the 17 agreed sustainable development goals SDGs requires transforming the UN and WTO legal systems as well as international investment law and adjudication UN and WTO law protect regulatory competition between diverse neo liberal state capitalist European ordo liberal and developing countries conceptions of multilevel trade and investment regulation However geopolitical rivalries and trade wars increasingly undermine transnational rule of law and effective regulation of market failures governance and constitutional failures Protecting the WTO legal and dispute settlement system remains essential for SDGs such as climate change mitigation measures and access to medical supplies and vaccines in global health pandemics Investment law and adjudication must better reconcile governmental duties to protect human rights and decarbonize economies with the property rights of foreign investors The constitutional human rights and environmental litigation in Europe enhances the legal accountability of democratic governments for protecting sustainable development However European economic constitutionalism has been rejected by neoliberalism China's authoritarian state capitalism and many developing countries governments The more that regional economic orders like the China led Belt and Road networks reveal heterogeneity and power politics block UN and WTO reforms the more the US led neoliberal world order risks disintegrating UN and WTO law must promote private public network governance and civil society participation in order to stabilize and depoliticize multilevel governance that protects SDGs and global public goods The World Trade Organization and the Environment P. Rao, 2000-09-19 This book explains the role and limitations of liberalized international trade on the global environment and sustainable development A distinguishing feature of this book is an integration of trade environment and development perspectives for operationally meaningful policy purposes The topics explored include an analysis of the global trade regimes their interrelationships with the existing multilateral environmental agreements institutional mechanisms governed by the World Trade Organization and a framework for pragmatic reforms International Trade, Investment, and the Sustainable Development Goals Cosimo Beverelli, Jürgen Kurtz, Damian Raess, 2020-10 A multi disciplinary investigation of how economic globalization can help achieve the UN s 2030 Agenda exploring trade offs among the Goals

The WTO, Trade Facilitation and Sustainable Development [electronic Resource] International Institute for Sustainable Development, Switzerland. Direktion für Entwicklungszusammenarbeit und Humanitäre Hilfe, 2003 Trade, Development and the Environment World Trade Organization Secretariat Staff, 2000-11-24 In recent years the relationships between trade and the environment and trade and development have become increasingly complex The need to reconcile the competing demands of economic growth economic development and environmental protection has become central to the multilateral trade agenda In this volume various commentators debate the role of the World Trade Organization and other institutions in addressing these challenges The book arises from the papers presented at two High Level Symposia hosted by the World Trade Organization in March 1999 on Trade and the Environment and Trade and Development The first section of the work focuses on the relationship between trade and the environment The issues addressed include the need for WTO members to pursue integrated trade and environmental policies in order to achieve sustainable development ways in which the removal of trade restrictions and distortions can lead to positive environmental and development solutions the relationship between WTO provisions and trade measures contained in environmental agreements and the need for transparency and effective interaction between civil society and the trade community The second section examines the growing importance of developing countries in the global trading system over the last 30 years and the ways in which the inequalities which persist between countries may be addressed The papers include discussion of the need for integration of the least developed countries into the multilateral trading system the ways in which international institutions may work together to realize the objective of development the complex role of trade liberalization in development and the importance of new technologies in accelerating integration between developing and developed countries Environment and Trade International Institute for Sustainable Development, 2000 Reference tool to facilitate broader understanding and awareness of relationship between environment and trade which can then become the basis on which fair and environmentally sustainable policies and trade flows are built A Sustainable Development Roadmap for the WTO Aaron Cosbey,2009 Envisioning a Sustainable Development Agenda for Trade and Environment A. Najam,M. Halle,R. Meléndez-Ortiz,2007-07-23 This book systematically explores the trade and environment interests of developing countries from a Southern perspective The contributors write explicitly about both hopes and fears in the South Essays are from leading experts and thought leaders from various regions of the South who work for bold new agendas and priorities for their region
