How and Why Does Spatial-Hearing Ability Differ among Listeners? What Is the Role of Learning and Multisensory Interactions? Guillaume Andéol, Brian D. Simpson, Ewan A. Macpherson, 2016-08-29 Spatial hearing ability has been found to vary widely across listeners A survey of the existing auditory space perception literature suggests that three main types of factors may account for this variability physical factors e g acoustical characteristics related to sound localization cues perceptual factors e g sensory cognitive processing perceptual learning multisensory interactions and methodological factors e g differences in stimulus presentation methods across studies However the extent to which these and perhaps other still unidentified factors actually contribute to the observed variability in spatial hearing across individuals with normal hearing or within special populations e g hearing impaired listeners remains largely unknown Likewise the role of perceptual learning and multisensory interactions in the emergence of a multimodal but unified representation of auditory space is still an active topic of research A better characterization and understanding of the determinants of inter individual variability in spatial hearing and of its relationship with perceptual learning and multisensory interactions would have numerous benefits In particular it would enhance the design of rehabilitative devices and of human machine interfaces involving auditory or multimodal space perception such as virtual auditory multimodal displays in aeronautics or navigational aids for the visually impaired For this Research Topic we have considered manuscripts that present new methods or review existing methods for the study of inter individual differences present new data or review existing data concerning acoustical features relevant for explaining inter individual differences in sound localization performance present new or review existing psychophysical or neurophysiological findings concerning spatial hearing and or auditory perceptual learning and or multisensory interactions in humans normal or impaired young or older listeners or other species discuss the influence of inter individual differences on the design and use of assistive listening devices rehabilitation or human machine interfaces involving spatial hearing or multimodal perception of space ergonomics Translational Perspectives in Auditory Neuroscience Kelly Tremblay, Robert F. Translational Research in Audiology, Neurotology, and the Hearing Sciences Colleen G. Le Prell, Edward Lobarinas, Arthur N. Popper, Richard R. Fay, 2016-10-26 Translational Research is the interface between basic science and human clinical application including the entire process from animal studies to human clinical trials phases I II and III Translational Research moves promising basic science results from the laboratory to bedside application Yet this transition is often the least defined least understood part of the research process Most scientific training programs provide little or no systematic introduction to the issues challenges and obstacles that prevent effective research translation even though these are the key steps that enable high impact basic science to ultimately result in significant clinical advances that improve patient outcome This volume will provide an overview of key issues in translation of research from bedside to bench to bedside not only from the perspective of the key funding agencies but also from the scientists and clinicians who are currently involved in the translational research process It will attempt to offer insight into real world experience with intellectual property and technology transfer activities that can help move auditory technologies ahead as scientists and clinicians typically have little or no formal training in these areas Translational Research in Audiology and the Hearing Sciences will be aimed at graduate students and postdoctoral investigators as well as professionals and academics It is intended to function as a high profile and up to date reference work on Translational Research in the auditory sciences emphasizing research programs in the traditional areas including drugs and devices as well as less traditional still emerging areas such as sensorineural hearing loss auditory processing disorder cochlear implants and hearing aids and tinnitus therapies Stanford Bulletin ,2003 Aphasia Rehabilitation Nadine Martin, Cynthia K. Thompson, Linda Worrall, 2008 As a consequence of the disability movement the thinking generated by the World Health Organization's classification of disability and functioning and an upturn in concern for the long term consequences of aphasia it has become apparent that two distinctive pathways for the treatment of aphasia have emerged over the past decade The first and most traditional involves assessment and management directed toward lessening the effects of the impairment of aphasia while the second pathway focuses less on specific language than on the psychosocial consequences of aphasia This unique text specifically contrasts impairment and consequences focused treatment with the aim of providing clinicians with a level playing field that permits them to evaluate for themselves the relative contributions that each approach provides to evaluate their relative strengths and weaknesses and finally to seek common ground An opening chapter sets the scene while the heart of the book based on real cases concerns five meticulously described yet hypothetical individuals with aphasia In each of the cases detailed descriptions and assessment results are provided and clinical management plans representing each approach are presented internationally by recognized expert clinicians Linguistics and Language Behavior Abstracts ,2008
