

Soil and Plant Study Guide

Soil Test on _____

Soil is important because many plants grow in soil.

Soil provides support and nutrients (food) for the plants.

Weathering is when water and living things help break down rocks and create soil.

Weathering can be caused by:

- Extreme heat, such as the heat from a volcano
- Pressure from ice
- Reactions between water and certain minerals
- Freezing and thawing of ice

Erosion is the movement of the broken down rock over time.

Soil is broken down rock.

There are 3 layers of soil: top soil, subsoil, and bedrock.

Topsoil is best for plant growth. Most of the humus is found in the topsoil.

Subsoil and bedrock are not good for plant growth.

Gilmour, Soil Science Society of America, 2002 Study Guide for the Soil Science Fundamentals Examination John Gilmour, Soil Science Society of America, 1999 FM 5-410 Military Soils Engineering U S Army, Luc Boudreaux, 2021-04-27 Construction in the theater of operations is normally limited to roads airfields and structures necessary for military operations This manual emphasizes the soils engineering aspects of road and airfield construction The references give detailed information on other soils engineering topics that are discussed in general terms This manual provides a discussion of the formation and characteristics of soil and the system used by the United States US Army to classify soils It also gives an overview of classification systems used by other agencies It describes the compaction of soils and quality control settlement and shearing resistance of soils the movement of water through soils frost action and the bearing capacity of soils that serve as foundations slopes embankments dikes dams and earth retaining structures This manual also describes the geologic factors that affect the properties and occurrences of natural mineral soil construction materials used to build dams tunnels roads airfields and bridges Theater of operations construction methods are emphasized throughout the manual Study Guide for the Soil Science Professional Practice Examination, Council of Soil Science Examiners, Soil Science Society of America, Madison, Wisconsin Lee Burras, Soil Science Society of America, 2002 Laboratory Manual for Introductory Soils Ray R. Weil, 2014 The exercises in this manual are designed to encourage the quantitative investigation of soil properties as well as to give you a feel for what soils are and how they behave You will have opportunities to see touch and manipulate soil in the lab and in the field This should help you develop a more in depth understanding of the soil system than could be conveyed by lectures and readings alone Some of these exercises are really demonstrations of important soil science concepts Experimental conditions are set up to study the effect of various factors on certain soil properties It is hoped that seeing is believing and that these exercises will reinforce principles learned in lecture A unifying thread throughout the lab manual is the repeated use of your own soil which you should sample carefully and thoughtfully at the start of the course By the end of the course you will have built up a substantial body of information about the soil you sampled The lab work will therefore be most meaningful to you if you make an effort in the beginning to obtain your soil sample from a place with which you interact and in which you have a real interest e g your home garden your uncle's farm your research site or your parent's back yard. Wherever it is, be sure that you sample a natural mineral soil, not an artificial soil mix. Another feature that will help your lab experience have meaning is the Comments column that is adjacent to the Procedural step in each exercise. This format is intended to explain the why of what you are doing as you are doing it. In their haste to complete a lab activity, students often fall into the trap of carrying out the procedural steps in cookbook fashion without stopping to consider why they are doing each step and what it means. You will be amazed at how much more meaningful each exercise can become if you constantly ask yourself or better yet ask your lab partner why am I doing this step and what does it mean. In addition, many of the techniques and approaches employed throughout these exercises will introduce you to some of the basics of scientific instrumentation and the scientific method of investigation. The skills you will learn include Acquisition and use of online soil survey information, performance of chemical titrations, use and calibration of electronic measuring instruments, e.g., pH meter and spectrophotometer, creation and use of standard curves, ability to estimate soil texture by feel, recognition and description of soil properties in the field. Enjoy.
