Tracking Nuclear Proliferation 1998 A Guide To Maps And Charts:

The Nuclear Shadow over South Asia, 1947 to the Present Kaushik Roy, 2017-03-02 This collection of seminal articles illustrates the reasons for the spiraling nuclear race in the Asian subcontinent and introduces the principal debates in the field. Authors discuss whether the acquisition of nuclear weapons by the South Asian powers has raised the likelihood of a nuclear war in the subcontinent or reduced the chance of a conventional war breaking out. They examine whether a small nuclear arsenal or a nuclear triad as declared by India is suitable for bringing stability to the region as well as the risk of an accidental nuclear conflagration. The first section charts the evolution of nuclear programmes on the basis of realpolitik and the second section analyses nuclear policies on the basis of religious and cultural ethos. A few essays turn the spotlight on the role of external powers in accelerating, decelerating and mediating the ongoing nuclear tension between India and Pakistan.

Tracking Nuclear Proliferation Rodney W. Jones, Mark G. McDonough, 1998 This is the seventh survey in the Carnegie Endowment's series on nuclear proliferation prepared under the direction of Carnegie Endowment senior associate Leonard S. Spector. This new assessment again offers the most recent available data on key developments in 17 nations of proliferation concern.

Nuclear Proliferation in South Asia Sumit Ganguly, S. Paul Kapur, 2008-08-06 This edited volume explores competing perspectives on the impact of nuclear weapons proliferation on the South Asian security environment. The spread of nuclear weapons is one of the world's foremost security concerns. The effect of nuclear weapons on the behaviour of newly nuclear states and the potential for future international crises are of particular concern. As a region of burgeoning economic and political importance, South Asia offers a crucial test of proliferation's effects on the crisis behaviour of newly nuclear states. This volume creates a dialogue between scholars who believe that nuclear weapons have stabilized the subcontinent and those who believe that nuclear weapons have made South Asia more conflict prone. It does so by pairing competing analyses of four major regional crises: the 1987 Brasstacks crisis, the Indo-Pakistani crisis of 1990, the 1999 Kargil war which occurred after the nuclear tests, and the 2001-2 Indo-Pakistani militarized standoff. In addition, the volume explores the implications of the South Asian nuclear experience for potential new nuclear states such as North Korea and Iran.

Putting Teeth in the Tiger Michael Brzoska, George A. Lopez, 2009-08-07 Foreign affairs practitioners and policy analysts claim that international arms embargoes usually fail due to the lack of political will among national governments to implement and enforce these restrictions. This book includes chapters that examine some of the complex cases of arms embargoes such as Iraq, Pakistan, Angola, and Liberia.

Military Industry and Regional Defense Policy Timothy D. Hoyt, 2017-07-05 Military Industry and Regional Defense Policy re-examines military industrialization in the developing world, focusing on policy making in producer states and the impact of security perceptions on such policy making. Timothy D. Hoyt reassesses the role of regional state sub-systems in international relations and recent historical studies of international technology and arms transfers. Looking at Israel, Iraq, and India, the three most powerful regional powers in the Cold War era, he presents an expert analysis of the three sided phenomena of the regional hegemony the regional competitor and the small over achiever This new book breaks away from existing literature on military industries in the developing world which has focused on their economic and development costs and benefits These past studies have used primitive methodologies that focus on the production of complete weapons systems a misleading gauge in a world of growing international defense cooperation They have also ignored empirical evidence of the impact of local military industrial production on Cold War regional conflict and of the defence planning and concerns that drove development of indigenous military industries in key regional powers This new text delivers an incisive new perspective Tracking Nuclear Proliferation Rodney W. Jones, Mark G. McDonough, 1998 This is the seventh survey in the Carnegie Endowment s series on nuclear proliferation prepared under the direction of Carnegie Endowment senior associate Leonard S Spector This new assessment again offers the most recent available data on key developments in 17 nations of proliferation concern American Book Publishing Record Cumulative 1998 R R Bowker Publishing, 1999-03 A Guide to the Nuclear Arms Control Treaties David Browning Thomson, 2001 World Bank China Library on CD-Rom , 1998 Nuclear Proliferation in the Indian Subcontinent Hooman Peimani, 2000-08-30 The main impact of the May 1998 nuclear tests of India and Pakistan was not on the nuclear non proliferation regime Peimani asserts but on the structure of the international system The tests could not encourage massive nuclear proliferation as many natural factors prevent such a scenario but they surely contributed to the weakening of the mainly American dominated international system The failure of nuclear India and Pakistan to achieve their objectives has increased their dissatisfaction with a system which they see as discriminating against them on the grounds of their insignificant nuclear arsenals and their severe underdevelopment Given their limited resources their attempts to deal with these problems in the near future and in particular to develop credible arsenals would be self exhausting and not feasible Their failure has turned them into dissatisfied regional powers who are being pushed toward forming alliances with their long time friends Russia and China respectively Each has strong reasons for dissatisfaction with the American system which is marginalizing them Their concerns about common enemies and threats as well as their economic and political needs are pushing these states toward the formation of tacit or official alliances Decades of friendship and extensive ties make them natural allies and encourage the formation of an alliance between India and Russia on the one side and China and Pakistan on the other By creating strong regional poles these predictably hostile alliances will contribute to the weakening of the international system and the consolidation of a rising multipolarity Scholars students and researchers involved with foreign policy American Indian and American Pakistani relations and international military political relations will find this analysis of particular interest Cumulated Index to the Books , 1999 A Quantitative Assessment of Nuclear Weapons Proliferation Risk Utilizing Probabilistic Methods Dennis Shannon Sentell, 2002 A comparative quantitative assessment is made of the nuclear weapons proliferation risk between various nuclear reactor fuel cycle concepts using a probabilistic method The work presented details quantified proliferation resistance metrics of a pressurized water reactor PWR a PWR utilizing thorium as a fertile component of the nuclear fuel Radkowsky Thorium Reactor RTR and a high temperature gas cooled reactor with a pebble bed core PBMR This probabilistic method permits integration of all aspects of fissile material proliferation in formulating an overall estimate of relative proliferation risk The reactor fuel cycle concepts are examined along a weapons useable plutonium diverted from spent reactor fuel proliferation pathway in order to determine these values and concepts with low values of this estimate are favorable for continued development in terms of lowered proliferation potential A determination is also made of those reactor fuel cycle technical features that contribute the most to minimizing the proliferation success within these risk estimates Identification of areas affecting these importance measures i e reactor fuel cycle practices technical features safeguard practices and resource allocations allows for further research into these vital areas The example and results presented in this work are an illustration of an integrated analysis utilizing a probabilistic method The subjectivity used in determining various factors and confidence levels for this analysis is based on the author s own reasoning opinion and judgment in light of political economic and technical considerations The results implications and conclusions concerning different reactor fuel cycles are applicable only within the context of this subjectivity as applied within this methodology
