Freud's Converts Vicki Clifford, 2020-06-16 This work is an exploration of the relationship which psychotherapy has with religion Sigmund Freud and Carl Rogers were chosen for this exposition because they were each seduced by the high status given to science Freud and Rogers both founders of psychotherapies left a legacy which is not that of scientists whom they claimed they were Freud and Rogers each had a problematic relationship with religion This has had a lasting effect on the work and attitudes of their respective followers In order to explore effectively this relationship the work begins with a critical examination of the historical context in which both Freud and Rogers worked and how in their determination to be scientists both missed the importance of the religious The work continues with an exploration of the effects of this legacy on the work of contemporary psychotherapists The context in which their followers work relies on a relationship with the founder which goes beyond that of science and in addition each practitioner is influenced by socio economic circumstances which are peculiar to them The resistance from psychotherapists to embrace religion has been complex although as it will be illustrated today there are some who are acknowledging the importance of the spiritual That psychotherapy functions as a religious movement has been excluded by practitioners in their determination to reflect the wishes of their founder which was that their work should be regarded as science Psychotherapists have traditionally been considered the custodians of the real and that their clients are the ones suffering from delusions With respect to their attitudes to religion not least the spiritual the positions seem to be reversed bound to gain recognition for one of the sources of this institution it by no means claims exclusiveness for this source or even first rank among the concurring factors Only a synthesis from various fields of research can decide what relative importance in the genesis of religion is to be assigned to the mechanism which we are to discuss but such a task exceeds the means as well as the intentions of the psychoanalyst 1 The first chapter of this book made us acquainted with the conception of totemism We heard that totemism is a system which takes the place of religion among certain primitive races in Australia America and Africa and furnishes the basis of social organization We know that in 1869 the Scotchman MacLennan attracted general interest to the phenomena of totemism which until then had been considered merely as curiosities by his conjecture that a large number of customs and usages in various old as well as modern societies were to be taken as remnants of a totemic epoch Science has since then fully recognized this significance of totemism I quote a passage from the Elements of the Psychology of Races by W Wundt 1912 as the latest utterance on this question I Taking all this together it becomes highly probable that a totemic culture was at one time the preliminary stage of every later evolution as well as a transition stage between the state of primitive man and the age of gods and heroes It is necessary for the
