Triumph At Kapyong Canadas Pivotal Battle In Korea:

Triumph at Kapyong Dan Bjarnason, 2017-06-21 Afghanistan is not Canada's first war in Asia. We've been there before a half century ago in Korea. And it was a meat grinder scarcely remembered now, a war in which on one hilltop on one April night freshly minted Canadian soldiers made a desperate stand that prevented catastrophe. In all twenty-five thousand Canadians fought in Korea. By the time the shooting stopped, more than five hundred had been killed on lonely hilltops and in desolate ravines. Five hundred in only two years. In Canada's war in Korea, there were no Vimy Ridges or Normandys. In Korea, Canadians were shot down in their fours and fives, mostly on patrols and in ambushes. It was largely a war at night in small groups. But not always. There were sometimes terrifying battles where outposts were swamped by Chinese human-wave attacks. This is the story of one such battle: Canada's first in Korea, in April 1951, on a barren and rocky hill near a nothing village called Kapyong, on the edge of nowhere. It's the story of 700 men, all volunteers in the 2nd Battalion of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. They'd signed up specifically to fight in Korea, and now on this April night they found themselves surrounded by thousands of Chinese soldiers sweeping around their positions. In April 1951, the Chinese launched an offensive plunging straight for the South Korean capital, Seoul. Other allied positions collapsed around the Canadians. Only the lonely Patricias blocked the road. And now it was their turn for the Chinese treatment. The Patricias had the wrong weapons and were trained in the wrong tactics for this war. Most were utter amateurs. This was a true People's Army: cab drivers, lumberjacks, farm boys, and adventurers. They were up against a seasoned enemy, better armed and with immense battle savvy, fresh from their victories in the Chinese Civil War. And yet, in a terrifying battle in the dark that had the feel of Thermopylae, with several hundred against several thousand, with hand-to-hand fighting with bayonets and shovels, with foxholes lost and retaken, with calling down artillery fire on their own positions, they held. The Patricias that night changed the course the war could have taken. Kapyong is about what did not happen. The Canadian positions did not collapse. Kapyong did not fall. Seoul was not captured. The Chinese breakthrough went nowhere. And so the Korean War did not end abruptly in April 1951. For the Chinese, Kapyong had simply been too much. By dawn, they had abandoned the field. Incredibly, the Patricias' casualties were ten dead and 23 wounded. Chinese dead, although unknown, must have been in the many hundreds. At no point had there been talk among the Canadians of breaking out; they had simply decided to tough it out on their hilltop. The Kapyong story sparkles with qualities that Canadians believe make up their national character: sacrifice, courage, initiative, modesty, and an uncomplicated, rock-solid belief in themselves. It is the story of the Patricias' cool and cranky commander, James Stone, a World War Two veteran of the Italian campaign who applied his mountain warfare savvy to the wilds of Korea. It's the story of Ken Barwise, who single-handedly recaptured a lost machine gun from the Chinese. It's the story of Smiley Douglas, who reached for a live grenade which landed in the midst of his platoon. It exploded just as he tossed it, free blowing off his hand. It's the story of Michael Levy, who had fought as a teenager against the Japanese in Malaya as a guerrilla. At

MacKenzie,2013-03-12 An excellent history of a massive Communist offensive and the brigades that resisted it H War The sacrifice of the British regiment known as the Glorious Glosters in defense of the Imjin River line and the hilltop fights of Australian and Canadian battalions in the Kapyong Valley have achieved great renown Using official and unofficial source material ranging from personal interviews to war diaries this in depth study the first of its kind seeks to disentangle the mythology surrounding both battles and explain why events unfolded as they did Based on thorough familiarity with all available sources many not previously utilized it sheds new light on fighting the forgotten war In Korea on the night of 22nd April 1951 communist forces unleashed what remains to this day their greatest offensive since Zhukov s storm on Berlin In the desperate fighting that followed the key flanks of free world forces were held by one British and one Commonwealth brigade The former took on a Chinese army the latter a Chinese division Six decades later an American historian has dismantled the barriers between Australian British Canadian and New Zealand accounts of those whirlwind days to compose the only comparative analysis of the tragedy on the Imjin and the stand at Kapyong Andrew Salmon author of Scorched Earth Black Snow Britain and Australia in the Korean War 1950 The Ashgate Research Companion to the Korean War

Donald W. Boose, 2016-03-23 This essential companion provides a comprehensive study of the literature on the causes, course and consequences of the Korean War 1950-1953. Aimed primarily at readers with a special interest in military history and contemporary conflict studies, the authors summarize and analyze the key research issues in what for years was known as the Forgotten War. The book comprises three main thematic parts, each with chapters ranging across a variety of crucial topics covering the background, conduct, clashes and outcome of the Korean War. The first part sets the historical stage with chapters focusing on the main participants. The second part provides details on the tactics, equipment and logistics of the belligerents. Part III covers the course of the war, with each chapter addressing a key stage of the fighting in chronological order. The enormous increase in writings on the Korean War during the last thirty years, following the release of key primary source documents, has revived and energized the interest of scholars. This essential reference work not only provides an overview of recent research but also assesses what impact this has had on understanding the war. Let the Bastards

Come David W. Cameron, 2024-04-03 Anzac Day 2024 represents the 73rd anniversary of the critical battle of Kapyong, 23 to 25 April 1951. This book for the first time tells the full story of the Australian, Canadian, New Zealand and American units involved. Fewer than 1,000 Australian and Canadian infantrymen supported by New Zealand artillery and 15 American Sherman tanks fought off an entire Chinese Division of over 12,000 men and contributed significantly to defeating the great Chinese August offensive. The battle of Kapyong was fought during a heavy downpour in mountainous terrain with Chinese units infiltrating the Australian lines, which extended for seven kilometres. Given the small number of men involved and the long defensive line, several strong points were quickly established. The Australians almost alone but with support from New Zealand gunners and some American tanks for the first 24 hours held back the Chinese and were at times surrounded by large numbers of Chinese who launched ongoing human wave attacks against their isolated positions but the line held with Australians leading bayonet counter charges against the Chinese. Within 24 hours Canadian troops were committed to the battle and for 12 hours also faced significant attempts by the Chinese to surround their position; they too held their ground. The battle of Kapyong was truly a decisive battle of the Korean War and for their heroic actions during the battle of Kapyong the Australian and Canadian infantrymen and American tankers were awarded a rare US Presidential Unit Citation.
