ripple tank experiment sf scientific - Feb 15 2022

web mar 7 2016 1. The purpose of this experiment is to investigate the relationship between the frequency of the waves and the wavelength of the waves in a ripple tank. The independent variable is the frequency of the waves and the dependent variable is the wavelength of the waves. The control variables are the depth of the water and the temperature of the water. The method involves using a ripple tank and a wave generator to create waves of different frequencies. The wavelength of the waves is measured by observing the distance between two consecutive crests or troughs. The results show that the wavelength of the waves is inversely proportional to the frequency of the waves. The conclusion is that the relationship between frequency and wavelength in a ripple tank is consistent with the theoretical prediction.
