The English Tongue Lewis Worthington Smith, 2015-07-11 Excerpt from The English Tongue And Other Poems The English Tongue Words that have tumbled and tossed from the Avon and Clyde On to where Indus and Ganges pour down to the tide Words that have lived that have felt that have gathered and grown Words Is it nothing that no other people have known Speech of such myriad voices so full and so free Song by the fireside and crash of the thunders at sea Weight of the Teuton upborne by the joy of the Celt Grace from the halls where the courtiers of Normandy knelt Easy precision that plays through the laughter of France Mysteries of dim Irish fairylands thronged in the dance All of the moods of the world have been caught and been sung Changed to its substance the final invincible tongue Words They are symbols perhaps but the things that we live Keep in their closure the joys we can take and can give Narrow themselves to our speech and the life of the race Holds to the scope of the lexicon Idle is place About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
