Kraijenhoff,J.R. Moll,2012-12-06 Advances in computer technology in the technology of communication and in mathematical modelling of processes in the hydrological cycle have recently improved our potential to protect ourselves against damage through floods and droughts and to control quantities and qualities in our water systems This development was demonstrated in a 1983 post experience course at Wageningen University where an international group of experts reviewed successful modelling techniques and described the design and operation of a number of forecasting and control systems in drainage basins and river reaches of various sizes and under various geographical and climat ological conditions A special effort was made to bridge the gap between theory and practice case studies showed that each forecasting system was designed to meet a set of specific requirements and they illustrated that the forecasting system can only be expected to operate reliably if on the one hand it is based on sound theoretical concepts and methods and if on the other hand it is robust so that also under adverse conditions it will continue to collect and process the necessary input data and produce correct and timely signals We were pleased to meet with encouragement for preserving the course material and making it available to a wider public This was effected by the team of authorf who elaborated updated and harmonized the materia in two stages first into an issue of our university department and finally into the manuscript of this book Reports of the Foreign Mission Committee and the Women's Association for Foreign Missions Church of Scotland.
