Mentalization-Based Treatment for Developmental Trauma Nicole Muller, Emma Morris, Nick Midgley, 2025-09-10

Mentalization Based Treatment for Developmental Trauma offers mental health practitioners a transdiagnostic model to support the needs of traumatized children with both internalizing emotional and externalizing behavioural difficulties and shows how MBT can be applied to meet the needs of children who have experienced various types of developmental trauma. This volume includes contributions from global experts in MBT who share their experience of using the method with traumatized children in a range of settings from individual therapy to group work and work with parents carers and the networks around the child. They highlight the benefits of using MBT with different groups such as children in foster or residential care or those who are refugees. The chapters offer a framework for clinicians to support children to better process and regulate their emotions highlighting the importance of early intervention as a means of mitigating certain psychopathologies that commonly result from developmental trauma. With clinical vignettes throughout this book covers different stages of treatment such as assessment direct therapy with the child work with the network and support for carers and parents. This book is a vital resource for child counsellors psychologists psychoanalysts and therapists who work with children who have experienced developmental trauma as well as junior psychologists and child psychiatrists mental health nurses social workers and others working in child mental health services.

Treating Trauma Toni V. Heineman, June M. Clausen, Saralyn C. Ruff, 2013-08-15

Clinicians working with traumatized youth face many challenges in supporting growth and development while addressing the many negative consequences of abuse and neglect. When working with youth in foster care additional obstacles must be overcome: changing placements, overwhelmed substitute caregivers, caseworker turnover, complication with birth siblings and family and communication difficulties with and within the child welfare system. Treating Trauma: Relationship Based Psychotherapy with Children, Adolescents and Young Adults presents a theoretically based and empirically supported framework for work with traumatized children, youth and young adults who have spent time in foster care. It offers vivid examples of cases from the work of clinicians of A Home Within, a national non profit focused on meeting the emotional needs of current and former foster youth. These nine case studies illustrate the vital role that relationships play in helping overcome the trauma of chronic unexpected and unexplained losses. They describe the work with clients, the collateral work and also the therapists' personal experiences of treating this vulnerable population. This work also explores the impact of secondary trauma on those working in and around the foster care system and addresses ways that therapists and others vulnerable to vicarious trauma can protect themselves as well as their clients. In particular, three chapters examine the power of peer consultation in sustaining therapeutic work with vulnerable and traumatized populations. Methods of integrating evidence based approaches into treatment of youth with multiple mental health problems and unavailable parents are discussed and explored. Essential elements of effective mental health interventions with traumatized foster youth are presented and illustrated.
