

The Sprint

The Speed Triple

easy to see that taking on the Japanese on their own territory – something Triumph said they never intended to do – was not a good idea, up against the cutting edge race-replicas of the day the Daytonas couldn't live up to their billing as sportsbikes.

Model development

The range stayed basically unchanged for two years, until the Cologne Show of '92. Looking back at the first range it is now easy to see – hindsight again – that the identity of all the models were far too close. The sports tourer Trophy models were reckoned to be a little too sporting, the basic Tridents still had the handlebar and footrest positions of faired bikes. Triumph management later agreed that the first range evinced a certain lack of confidence, that was certainly not the case of the revamped 1993 range.

Visitors to the Cologne Show in September '92 agreed that the Triumphs were the stars, any lack of confidence there may have been two years before was completely gone. The only short-stroke motor left in the range was in the 750 Trident which, like its 900 cc big brother, got a total cosmetic revamp. Any shyness the management may have felt about the Triumph name's past was shaken off as the new Tridents went retro style. Footrests were lowered and bars raised, the engine's cosmetics were tidied up and the motor and exhausts got a black finish. The engine styling was important as the original Tridents, looked very much like faired bikes with the bodywork off, such was the plumber's nightmare of hoses and cables open to view. But most strikingly, these new Tridents unashamedly drew on the old Triumph heritage in their colour schemes with two-tone tanks featuring gold pinstriping – and all in very classic colours.

The original Trident wasn't totally abandoned though, it metamorphosed into the Trident Sprint, a 900 Trident with the addition of a striking twin-headlight half-fairing but retaining the sporty riding position of the first models. The two Daytona models quietly changed into one, this time with the 900 triple motor rather than the short-stroke three or four-cylinder motors. A slightly lower screen, new side panels and upswep silencers gave the bike a much sportier look; the lines were good enough to win a British Design Council Award for the bike's styling. The sports tourer identity of the Trophy models was emphasised by a more relaxed riding position with higher bars and lower footrests for both rider and pillion. The only real criticism of the 1200 Trophy – that it could do with more braking power – was answered with new four-piston calipers on the front discs. Its long distance credentials were underlined with better mirrors, a higher screen option and a clock.

Overall, the identities of the original bikes became more individual and more obviously separated; the Trophy models became more touring oriented, the Daytona more sporty looking and the Trident models more traditional. The factory even had the confidence to put small Union Flag emblems on the side panels of each model, no more apologising for the imagined shortcomings of British engineering.

Despite this spreading of the range's appeal, all these bikes were still built on the original modular concept. All the 900 triples made 100 PS (74 kW), the 750 Trident 97 PS (71 kW) and the 1200 Trophy 110 PS (80 kW). Note that the smaller Trident made nearly as much peak power as the 900, but the bigger motor made over 25% more torque for astounding mid-range punch. There was, however, an exception to this rule of uniformity in the shape of a brand new bike, the Tiger 900. This model was in the enduro/desert-racer style much favoured on Continental Europe but not at all popular at home in the UK. Here was a Triumph with a 19-inch front tyre, wire wheels and a lower power output than the other 900s, 85 PS (63 kW). Both the chassis and engine parts were slightly different from the rest of the range, the Tiger got a higher seat and longer wheelbase and a retuned – the factory would not like the word detuned – motor with a massive spread of power and torque, traded off against a loss of top-end power and speed, not the most important requirements on a bike of this type. This retuning was accomplished by internal changes to such things as camshaft lift and timing and set the precedent for what was to come. Lack of ultimate performance
