Myanmar during a time of crisis Myanmar Agriculture Policy Support Activity, 2025-04-01 Drawing on data from five rounds of the Myanmar Household Welfare Survey MHWS collected between December 2021 and June 2023 with more than 12 000 respondents per round this report analyzes individual migration migration in which one or a few household members leave the household To complement this analysis we utilize data from the Myanmar Migration Assessment carried out in June and July 2023 in a sub sample of MHWS households with household members who have migrated since 2013 Over the year and a half period from December 2021 to June 2023 an estimated 6 451 394 household members 15 and older 11.8 percent of the population and 19.9 percent of the adult population left their households Kayah had the highest percentage of migrants followed by Kachin Kayah and Mon with migration rates over 25 percent of the adult population Significantly more men migrated than women Over the period more individuals left for work within Myanmar than for overseas work or for other reasons including marriage education or to join family Using the Myanmar Migration Assessment sub sample of 5 455 of individuals who have migrated since 2013 we analyze the migration process and destination characteristics Most migrants in our sample only migrated once 91 percent Between 2021 and 2022 there was a huge jump in migration from 10 percent of the sample to 24 percent Further migration was already 23 percent of our sample in June 2023 Therefore individual migration is likely to be much higher in 2023 than 2022 Between 2021 and 2023 most of the individual migration was internal 79 percent versus 21 percent overseas Internal migration and migration abroad are increasing at the same rate Most internal migration was to Yangon followed by Mandalay and Shan Around 27 percent of all individuals migrated to Yangon

over the whole period Migration to Mandalay decreased from 2010 to 2023 while migration to Shan increased Migration abroad is mainly to Thailand and Malaysia Most individuals migrated to find better employment Employment was the most important driver of migration across all years all destinations all age groups and for men and women In 2021 2023 34 percent of individuals left their homes to find more work opportunities 18 percent left their home to find a higher paid job and 7 percent left to find better working conditions At the same time an increasing number of individuals migrated for education as well In 2021 2023 12 percent of migrants were household heads most other migrants were either sons or daughters of the head While between 2013 and 2016 only 44 percent of migrants had children when they migrated in 2021 2023 91 percent of migrants had children before they migrated Overall most migrants regardless of their primary reason for migrating had friends or relatives who had migrated to their destination before them this includes 55 percent of internal migrants and 58 percent of migrants abroad Most migrants participated in most or all of the decisions to migrate This was true for 85 percent of migrants that went abroad and 79 percent of migrants that remained within Myanmar In Mandalay and Shan fewer migrants fully participated in the decision to migrate
