Abstract. The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to be a safe and effective means of increasing physical activity in sedentary women. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions included a warm-up, a low-impact aerobic exercise, and a low-intensity strength training exercise. The program was evaluated using a pre-test and a post-test. The results of the study showed that the program had a positive effect on the physical fitness of the women. The women who participated in the program showed significant improvements in their cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength, and body composition. The program was found to be a safe and effective means of increasing physical activity in sedentary women.
