

A person wearing a white long-sleeved shirt and a bright yellow apron is shown from the chest down. They are holding a metal sugar scoop and pouring a stream of white sugar onto a white surface, possibly a cake or a piece of parchment paper. In the background, another person's arm and hand are visible, working with a metal baking pan. A glass bowl containing dark ingredients is also visible in the lower right corner. The overall scene is set in a kitchen with a wooden countertop.

Rose Arny, 2003      Tasting Difference Gitanjali G. Shahani, 2020-05-15 Tasting Difference examines early modern discourses of racial cultural and religious difference that emerged in the wake of contact with foreign peoples and foreign foods from across the globe Gitanjali Shahani reimagines the contact zone between Western Europe and the global South in culinary terms emphasizing the gut rather than the gaze in colonial encounters From household manuals that instructed

English housewives how to use newly imported foodstuffs to the spiced Indian air of A Midsummer Night's Dream from the repurposing of Othello as an early modern pitchman for coffee in ballads to the performance of disgust in travel narratives Shahani shows how early modern genres negotiated the allure and danger of foreign tastes Turning maxims such as We are what we eat on their head Shahani asks how did we the colonized subjects become what you the colonizing subjects eat How did we become alternately the object of fear and appetite loathing and craving Shahani takes us back several centuries to the process by which food came to be inscribed with racial character and the racial other came to be marked as edible showing how the racializing of food began in an era well before chicken tikka masala and Balti cuisine Bringing into conversation critical paradigms in early modern studies food studies and postcolonial studies she argues that it is in the writing on food and eating that we see among the earliest configurations of racial difference and it is experienced both as a different taste and as a taste of difference
