The Woods-Rider Frank Lillie Pollock, Leaning from his saddle Joe Marshall looked into the cup that hung on the turpentine tree One side of the great long leaf pine had been stripped of its bark to a height of three feet leaving a tall livid scar sticky with resinous exudation A thick layer of hardened gum crusted over its lower edge and two tin gutters near the top carried the gummy oozings into the two quart tin cup suspended from a hook driven into the tree It was only March but the weather had been unusually warm and the gum was running in thin viscous threads imperceptibly slow but the cup was half full of the sticky whitish mass I declare we can begin dipping soon Joe said to himself glancing around at the other pines which were all similarly blazed and tapped This was the best corner of the Burnam turpentine orchard The trees that grew here were splendid long leaf pines shooting up straight as arrows almost a hundred feet before they broke into palm like branches and many of them were so large that the turpentine gatherers had been able to chip them on both sides and hang two cups on them For about two hundred yards this park like growth lasted where his horse s feet trod silently on the thick layer of pine needles then a slight descent took him out into the open ground The sunlight seemed blinding after the shade of the woods The sky was hazily blue radiating an intense heat High overhead two buzzards soared in circles The ground was a tangle of gallberry bushes and Joe rode through them by a trail that he followed daily on his rounds From the gallberry flat it led down to a creek swamp dense with titi and bay trees and tangled with bamboo vine and it wound through this jungle across the creek itself Want to drink Snowball said Joe as the black horse showed an inclination to pause at the clear water and while Snowball drank Joe dismounted and dashed water over his face and arms It was unusually hot for March even in southern Alabama and from the look of the sky he judged that there might be thunder before night Joe was one of Burnam s three woods riders and it was his duty to keep his eye on the run of gum and the work of the negroes on a third of the big tract As he rode on he encountered several of the chippers at work making the regular enlargement of the blaze on the pine bark occasionally he found a tree neglected and had to find the man in whose furrow it lay reprimand him and send him back now and then he had to stop and readjust a cup that had become displaced Once he found two negroes idling and swapping stories behind a thicket and he sent them back to work with good natured bullying which they took with equal good nature They understood Joe Marshall and he understood them He swung through the woods in a wide circle that would at last take him back to the camp It was growing late in the afternoon and most of the negroes were also straggling out of the woods Provided they finished their furrow they could leave when they pleased but from the top of a ridge Joe caught sight of a chipper still at work going at a fast trot from tree to tree

His clothes were ragged and there were not many of them his arms were bare and his black face streamed with perspiration He carried a turpentine hack a tool very like a small pick with a keen gouging end and at each tree he ripped away with a skilful stroke another inch of the gummy bark at the top of the slash
