

Introduction

In both academic and non-academic contexts, narrative report is an important written document which provides information of what was accomplished and its results. It describes the event holistically in a chronological manner, reporting its type, purpose, consequences, result and its implication.

Pre-writing

Important Moves in Writing the Parts of a Narrative Report

INTRODUCTION

This part of narrative report writing should present the topic for discussion. As a rule, the introductory part consists of one paragraph. It gives the readers a notion of the basic discussion. This includes the sponsoring agency, the date and venue, and the purpose of the event.

BODY

This part of narrative report writing contains the discussion of the major activities conducted not limited to one paragraph. Each major activity is supported and elaborated, wherein a writer do not present personal opinion in the process of narrative report writing, but to describe and narrate the process objectively.

CONCLUSION

This part of the narrative report writing process requires presentation of the summary and the final idea. It is preferable that the statements presented in this part do not express partiality and prejudices. This includes drawing conclusions by citing the results revealed in the major activities conducted and their implications.
