Dramatic Personae

Jack Gladney - The narrator and protagonist has been chairman of Hitler studies at the College-on-the-Hill in the small Midwestern town of Blacksmith since he "invented Hitler studies in North America in March 1968" (4). Jack is around 50, and has been married five times (twice to Dana). He now lives with his fourth wife, Babette, who has also been married at least once before. They live with four of their children from previous marriages. Jack is obsessed with the fear of his own death, a persistent but largely repressed dread that becomes impossible to repress following his exposure to the toxic substance, Niphetos Derivative following a train accident. He has always seen himself as an essentially insignificant man hiding behind the status and persona of his academic position. However, since he neither reads nor speaks German, Jack's fear of being exposed as a fraud increases as a Hitler conference he is hosting at the college draws near.

Jack's wives

Dana Woodfellow, who currently lives in Mexico, is Jack's first and his fourth wife and the mother of蓀蓀蓀蓀. Dana is a government agent who "invented fiction for the CIA, mainly long serious novels with coded structures ... spoke Spanish to someone on the telephone ... [and] was a part-time spy" (217). According to Jack, when they were married, Dana liked to plot and often got him entangled in domestic and family battles at the College.

Janet Marney is Jack's second wife and the mother of蓀蓀蓀蓀. At the time of their marriage, she was "a foreign-currency analyst who did research for a secret group of advanced theorists connected to some controversial think-tank" (217), but she now lives in an ashram (a Hindu spiritual hermitage or monastery) in the "barren copper-mining town of Tule, Montana, now called Chacramalpa" where she is known as Mother David (24).

Twenty Sumner is Jack's third wife and the mother of蓀蓀蓀蓀. She "came from a distinguished old family that had a long tradition of spying and counterespionage" (217) and is recruited to a high-level under-cover operation named Malcolin Hunt. Twenty visits with Jack when their daughter蓀蓀蓀蓀 comes to visit in Blacksmith. She confesses that she still loves Jack and that Malcolin's extended periods living abroad under assumed identities make her very unhappy because when he goes under-cover she feels that she no longer knows her husband's true identity.

Babette is Jack's current wife and (from a previous marriage) the mother of蓀蓀蓀蓀 and蓀蓀蓀蓀. Babette does not have a career, but she teaches adult education classes in posture and reads to an elderly blind man named Old Man Trueswell. Having been married to sensitive, high-strung women in the past, Jack finds Babette's apparent calm, practicality and honesty to be reassuring. They have always discussed the question "Which of us will die first?" but Jack has not understood that Babette also has a deep-seated, acute fear of dying. Embarrassment to Jack, she has secretly participated in an experimental drug trial of Dylar to alleviate her fear. In her attempt to hide her emotions, and the actions she has taken, Babette becomes sensitive and evasive at home and apologetic about life in general.

Babette's family

Vernon Clucky is Babette's father. He is a good-natured man, with a terrible accident's scuff, who (unlike Jack and Babette) is seemingly unaffected by dying. Vernon works with his hands and knows how to build things which makes Jack, the academic, feel inferior and less masculine. Vernon drops by unexpectedly for a visit in the middle of the night. Despite Jack's protests, he
