

A person is seen from behind, sitting on a motorcycle. They are wearing a dark, possibly leather, motorcycle jacket. The scene is set against a sunset or sunrise background, with a bright sun on the left side of the frame, creating a warm, orange glow. The horizon is visible in the distance, and the water or a flat landscape is in the foreground. The motorcycle's handlebars and part of the seat are visible in the lower left corner.

On a motorcycle, you can't really think about more than where you are. There's a freedom that comes with that - from stress, worry, sweating the small stuff

Cowboy Poetry Matters Robert McDowell,2000 In his groundbreaking essay Can Poetry Matter reprinted here Dana Gioia suggested that many types of poetry assumed by some readers to be marginal art should not so easily be deleted from mainstream American literature Throughout the twentieth century perhaps no important writing has been as seriously and mistakenly overlooked by the literati as Cowboy poetry Essentially connected to the folk tale to legend myth the ballad and song and vitally enhanced by the contemporary voices of independent ranch women Cowboy poetry vividly connects us to our past and our fragile threatened natural environment The writers included here both working horse and cattle people and mainstream authors share the brand of bold expression and independent thought found only among the best literary artists Here is not literary theory Here is literary life An anthology as diverse as America herself
