

SECTION IV

DIFFERENTIAL FEED

Differential feed allows you to sew many different types of fabrics eliminating puckering on lightweight woven fabrics and stretching on knits.

When working on a serger without the differential feed feature, puckering and waving are unavoidable on some fabrics. Superlock owners need only to adjust the differential feed for professional seams and decorative applications as explained below.

Your Superlock has two sets of feed teeth. Each set of feed teeth has an individual feed mechanism which enables the feeding of fabric at a different ratio, therefore feeding more or less fabric into the back teeth giving the desired result. The differential feed is adjusted by the dial located on the right side of your Superlock behind the stitch length dial. It has been labeled for your convenience.
