These results demonstrate the importance of considering the effects of the environment on the expression of the MDR1 gene. The MDR1 gene is expressed in a tissue-specific manner, and its expression is regulated by a number of factors, including the environment. The results of this study suggest that the environment may play a role in the regulation of the MDR1 gene, and that this regulation may be important for the development of drug resistance in cancer cells. Further studies are needed to elucidate the mechanisms by which the environment regulates the expression of the MDR1 gene, and to determine whether these mechanisms can be exploited to develop new strategies for the treatment of cancer.
