Hot Spots Amitai Etzioni, 2017-07-12 There are important reasons for the distinct yet significant course adjustments in American and Western foreign policy which is currently focused on the Middle Eastern and Chinese hot spots In early 2012 the United States pivoted to make the Far East its military and strategic first priority thereby downgrading the Middle East This change in priorities has been accompanied by a curtailed military budget and the end of the two war doctrine Amitai Etzioni argues that pivoting towards the Far East is premature and flawed in principle China can and should be treated for the near future as a potential partner in a changing global order rather than contained and made into an enemy At the same time he argues the true hot spots continue to be in the Middle East albeit not in Iraq or Afghanistan but in Iran and Pakistan Less urgent but of great importance are the ways the West deals with a complex and varied Muslim world with political Islamic parties and social movements and with future waves of Arab awakening Here the distinction between security and nation building becomes essential for both normative and strategic reasons Etzioni expects that we will see few armed humanitarian interventions of the kind we witnessed in 2011 in Libya To this end he examines policies that threaten and favor the promotion of human rights This timely book is written with Etzioni's customary deep appreciation for important issues

The American Dream Through the Eyes of Black African Immigrants in Texas Ami R. Moore, 2013-04-18. Using James Truslow Adams' definition of the American dream, this book investigates whether black African immigrants in Texas are achieving the American dream. Almost all of the study participants Moore interviewed considered America a land of opportunity. Additionally, most of the black African immigrants' definitions of the American dream focused on material aspects. Although participants mostly reported that the United States had been good to them, they nonetheless felt that they had not yet achieved the American dream. Additionally, they reported that their lives in the United States had been at best incomplete. They also encountered other challenges which mainly reflected the moralistic aspect of the definition of the American dream. They reported experiences such as not being fully accepted by native-born Americans in general and by white Americans in particular, being discriminated against, and being unappreciated. In fact, all of these challenges created a sense of marginalization among study participants. However, aware of the benefits of migration, they were willing to endure these challenges.

The Gulf Military Balance Anthony H. Cordesman, Bryan Gold, 2014-03-12. The United States faces major challenges in dealing with Iran, the threat of terrorism, and the tide of political instability in the Arabian Peninsula. The presence of some of the world's largest reserves of oil and natural gas, vital shipping lanes, and Shia populations throughout the region have made the peninsula the focal point of US and Iranian strategic competition. Moreover, large youth populations, high unemployment rates, and political systems with highly centralized power bases have posed other economic, political, and security challenges that the Gulf states must address and that the United States must take into consideration when forming strategy and policy.
