Vail,2019-09-19 Interpreting the Environment at Museums and Historic Sites is for anyone who wants to better understand the environment that surrounds us and sustains us who wants to become a better steward of that environment and who wants to share lessons learned with others The process starts by focusing attention on the environment the physical space that constitutes the largest three dimensional object in museum collections It involves conceptualizing spaces and places of human influence spaces that contain layer upon layer documenting human struggles to survive and thrive This evidence exists in natural environments as well as city centers The process continues by adopting an environment centric view of the spaces destined to be interpreted This mind set forms the basis for devising research plans that document how humans have changed destroyed conserved and sustained spaces over time and the ways that the environment reacts Interpretation built on this evidence then becomes the basis for minds on engagement with the places that humans inhabit and the spaces that they have changed and continue to manipulate Interpreting the Environment at Museums and Historic Sites provides a tool kit designed to help you research environmental history document evidence of human influence on land and the environment over time and tailor that knowledge to new public engagement It proposes a multi disciplinary approach that requires expertise in the humanities as well as the sciences and social sciences to best understand space and place over time It incorporates case studies of the theory and method of environmental history to explore how human goals take lasting shape in the environment creating working environments getting water generating and harnessing power growing food traveling and trading building things and preserving natural landscapes Features include the Interpreting the Environment Tool Kit to help you launch the good work of interpreting the environment Raw Materials the evidence landscape ecosystems artifacts and the built environmentPreparation methods thinking like a naturalist scientist thinking like a historian combining approachesPlanning envisioning the goal proactive message stewardship sustainabilityPartnerships sharing work strength in numbers allying across disciplinary divides united in efforts to inform the public about their individual and collective effects on the landscape and the environmentPotential educating the public about people and places is part of a world wide goal with the cumulative effect of saving the planet one story at a time A Timeline and Bibliographic essay round out the book s resources The Historic Sites Survey and National Historic Landmarks Program Barry Mackintosh,1985 Myth, Memory, and the Making of the American Landscape Paul A. Shackel,2001-09-30 Penetrating insight into the processes by which our collective historical memory is constructed Through a range of case studies the authors explore how and why certain landscapes and monuments are intentionally endowed with specific messages why certain stories are obscured or forgotten and how collective memories change over time James Delle Franklin and Marshall College The authors in this collection show how the creation of a collective memory of highly visible objects and landscapes is an ongoing struggle their meanings always being constructed changed and challenged The sites and symbols the authors address are nationally recognized and include a balance of places that illuminate class ethnic racial and historical experiences Focusing on material culture they explore the tensions that exist among various groups elite landowners the National Park Service preservationists minority groups who compete for control over the interpretation of American public history

Remember Laura Mattoon D'Amore,Jeffrey Meriwether,2013-01-16 Commemorative practices are revised and rebuilt based on the spirit of the time in which they are re created Historians sometimes imagine that commemoration captures history but actually commemoration creates new narratives about history that allow people to interact with the past in a way that they find meaningful As our social values change race gender religion sexuality class our commemorations do too We Are What We Remember The American Past Through Commemoration analyzes current trends in the study of historical memory that are particularly relevant to our own present our biases our politics our contextual moment and strive to name forgotten overlooked and denied pasts in traditional histories Race gender and sexuality for example raise questions about our most treasured myths where were the slaves at Jamestowne How do women or lesbians protect and preserve their own histories when no one else wants to write them Our current social climate allows us to question authority and especially the authoritative definitions of nation patriotism and heroism and belonging How do we un commemorate things that were mis commemorated in the past How do we repair the damage done by past commemorations The chapters in this book contributed by eighteen emerging and established scholars examine these modern questions that entirely reimagine the landscape of commemoration as it has been practiced and studied before

Memorial Mania Erika Doss, 2022-12-22 In the past few decades thousands of new memorials to executed witches victims of terrorism and dead astronauts along with those that pay tribute to civil rights organ donors and the end of Communism have dotted the American landscape Equally ubiquitous though until now less the subject of serious inquiry are temporary memorials spontaneous offerings of flowers and candles that materialize at sites of tragic and traumatic death In Memorial Mania Erika Doss argues that these memorials underscore our obsession with issues of memory and history and the urgent desire to express and claim those issues in visibly public contexts Doss shows how this desire to memorialize the past disposes itself to individual anniversaries and personal grievances to stories of tragedy and trauma and to the social and political agendas of diverse numbers of Americans By offering a framework for understanding these sites Doss engages the larger issues behind our culture of commemoration Driven by heated struggles over identity and the politics of representation Memorial Mania is a testament to the fevered pitch of public feelings in America today
