spring trip north in 2016 Nothing is second hand except I did include hydrographic charts from Wilmington and Charleston ACOE where available to aid in transiting the worse of the shallow areas This year I have included waypoints for many of the most difficult areas such as Hell Gate Fernandina Jekyll Creek and a few others It can be very tedious manually entering the waypoints not to mention being error prone so I ve posted the waypoints as GPX Routes on my blog site at fleetwing blogspot com in the Pages section Since I use an iPad I ve also included instructions on how to transfer the GPX routes into the iPad for both the Navimatics Charts and Tides app and also the Garmin Mobile app Once loaded you will be following the same route I used in finding the depths I reported in the spring of 2016 The advice section has been updated with the latest iPad apps and links in the ebook version have been checked to be sure they work Many of the advice comments didn t change after all there s a base level of things to do that does not change year to year but there are still updates with additional experiences Thank you for considering the purchase of the guide The links have been left in blue with an underline I ve posted the active links on my blog page at fleetwing blogspace com so you don t have to google anything just find the link in the list and click Please leave a review on Amazon com all reviews are helpful to other boaters considering a trip down the ICW Bob423 aka Robert and Ann Sherer Waterway Guide Atlantic ICW 2011 Susan Landry,Terry Grant,2010-09
