Tourists And Tourism Identifying With People And Places Ethnicity And Identity Series:

Tourists and Tourism Simone Abram, Don Macleod, Jackie D. Waldren, 2021-04-26 The fact that tourism is a major global industry forecast to continue its dramatic growth well into the twenty first century is often cited as a rationale for its analysis However while the connection between individual locations and the world s global markets is an obvious product of tourism the heart of the tourist experience is the construction of identity the relation of the traveller to resident populations the participants views of themselves and others tourists search for authenticity and their testing of boundaries This book significantly furthers current debates on tourism by asking important and vexing questions about the nature of the tourist experience folk museums that forget many of the folk who live in the areas represented the environments and events that are shaped to meet the imagined dreams of tourist spectators the categorization of visitors and returnees who take up residence and participate in the construction of local identities the evolving meanings associated with indigenous culture tradition heritage representation reality and authenticity In renegotiating the definitions of tourism for the new millennium this book represents a major contribution to an emerging and highly topical area of study Kolor. Migrants of Identity Nigel Rapport,Andrew Dawson,1998-09 Global movement is commonly characterized as one of the quintessential experiences of our age Market forces territorial conflicts and environmental changes uproot an increasing number of people while mass communication travel tourism and a global market of commodities texts tastes fashions and ideologies place individuals more than ever in a global arena As traditional conceptions of individuals as members of stationary fixed and separate societies and cultures no longer convince to what extent does movement become central to individuals self conceptions How do people cultivate negotiate nurture and maintain an identity To what extent do individuals become migrants of identity whose home is movement Defining home as where one best knows oneself this pioneering book explores the various ways in which people perceive themselves to be at home in today s world Through a series of case studies authors show that for a world of travellers labour migrants exiles and commuters home comes to be found in behavioural routines and techniques in styles of dress and address in memories myths and stories in jokes and opinions In short people who live their lives in movement make sense of their lives as movement

The Media and the Tourist Imagination David Crouch,Rhona Jackson,Felix Thompson,2005-06-15 Tourism studies and media studies both address key issues about how we perceive the world They raise acute questions about how we relate local knowledge and immediate experience to wider global processes and they both play a major role in creating our map of national and international cultures Adopting a multidisciplinary approach this book explores the interactions between tourism and media practices within a contemporary culture in which the consumption of images has become increasingly significant A number of common themes and concerns arise and the contributions included are divided between those written from media studies awareness perspective concerned with the way the media imagines travel and tourism written from the point of view of the study of tourism considering how tourism practices are affected or altered by the media that attempt a direct comparison between the practices of tourism and the media Incorporating case study material from the UK the Caribbean Australia the US France and Switzerland this significant text ideal for students of culture media and tourism studies discusses tourism and the media as separate processes through which identity is constructed in relation to space and place

Reimagining Culture Sharon Macdonald,1997-11 Since the 1960s policies to revive minority cultures and languages have flourished But what does it mean to have a cultural identity And are minorities as deeply attached to their languages and traditions as revival policies suppose This book is a sophisticated analysis of responses to the Gaelic renaissance in a Scottish Hebridean community Its description of everyday conceptions of belonging and interpretations of cultural policy takes us into the world of Gaelic playgroups crofting local history religion and community development Historically and theoretically informed this book challenges many of the ways in which we conventionally think about ethnic and national identity This accessible and engaging account of life in this remote region of Europe provides an original and timely contribution to questions of considerable currency in a broad range of social science disciplines
