Traffic and Transport Psychology Geoffrey Underwood, 2005-06-09 Just as our transport systems become more and more important to our economic and social well being so they become more and more crowded and more at risk from congestion disruption and collapse Technology and engineering can provide part of the solution but the complete solution will need to take account of the behaviour of the users of the transport networks The role of psychologists in this is to understand how people make decisions about the alternative modes of transport and about the alternative routes to their destinations to understand how novice and other vulnerable users can develop safe and effective behaviours how competent users can operate within the transport system optimally and within their perceptual and cognitive limitations The contributions to this volume address these issues of how the use of our transport systems can be improved by taking into account knowledge of the behaviour of the people who use the systems Topics discussed include driver training and licensing driver impairment road user attitudes and behaviour enforcement and behaviour change driver support systems and the psychology of mobility and transport mode choice This work will be of value not only to psychologists but to all transport professionals interested in the application of psychology to traffic Handbook of Traffic Psychology Bryan E.

Huguenin, Talib Rothengatter, 2004 Traffic Psychology Talib Rothengatter, 1997 This special issue is based on papers presented some of the International Conference of Applied Psychology in Madrid in 1994 Over 100 presentations were made at this conference covering almost any conceivable aspect of applying psychology to traffic and transport Obviously within a single special issue it is impossible to provide a comprehensive concise overview of the state of the art within the field Instead a thematic approach is followed focusing on the motivational aspects of risk taking and deviant behavior preceded by a general overview of the main topics in the field It is concluded with a research note about the analysis of the psychological literature on driver behavior Simonet and Wilde discuss risk perception and acceptance and acceptance within the framework of risk homeostasis theory West and Hall discuss individual differences in terms of risk social motivation and attitudes towards traffic law violations Groeger and Chapman address the same issues but in a strictly experimental stance manipulating normative information presented to drivers These papers are a representation of where traffic psychology seems to be heading a realization that driver behavior is determined not only by performance factors i e what he or she is willing to do which are governed by individual cultural and situational variables The literature analysis carried out by Sivak shows that this focus is as yet not apparent in the general literature where alcohol and driver performance still are the dominant topics It is hoped that this special issue will convince psychologists that traffic and transport is a fascinating field of application Transportation, Traffic Safety and Health — Human Behavior Hans von Holst, Ake Nygren, Ake E. Andersson, 2012-12-06 The focus of this book is to present the latest aspects in the area of human behavior and its relation to planning of an optimal traffic safety The contributions from authors in various disciplines such as scientists medical practitioners administrators and practitioners from the car industry examine how road user behavior can cause accidents and how decision makers from various sectors of society may influence road users behavior The development of modern vehicles and new traffic systems requires more sophisticated behavior and technology New medical technologies such as improved neuropsychologic methods and descriptive mapping of behavior with imaging techniques facilitate the understanding of the anatomy and physiology of human behavior The increased knowledge of normal and pathologic behavior contributes to strengthen primary prevention with the goal of reducing traffic accidents Traffic Psychology Today Pierre-Emmanuel Barjonet, 2013-03-14 After several decades of research practice intervention and instruction traffic psychology is in need of a summary work outlining the main trends in the discipline Traffic Psychology Today provides a theoretical basis of the topic a summary of the acquired research in the field practical applications for government planners and a critical discussion of future trends Through a series of chapters contributed by an international group of researchers under the general editorship of Pierre Barjonet Traffic Psychology Today comprehensively synthesizes thinking in the psychology of traffic from its inception in the mid 1950s through the present day

Transportation Research Laurence Hartley, Tim Horberry, 2000 ICTTP 2000, 2000 Mobility and Environment Corrado Poli, 2011-06-28 Mobility and Environment calls for a mobility revolution which does not simply mean taking a bus instead of a car it implies a dramatic shift in the political debate from a technical to a political culture The author introduces his book by disputing non political Sustainable Development policies which are among the major culprits for the conservatism in environmental policies For at least forty years urban mobility policies based on compulsive infrastructure building have failed both in satisfying transportation demand and in coping with high environmental impacts Nonetheless decision makers keep employing the same professionals and therefore they act as shepherds who commit their sheep in the wolf s custody Corrado Poli treats mobility policy as a political ethical social and educational issue rather than as a mere civil engineering one Mobility and Environment challenges some deeply entrenched professional and economic monopolies which negatively affect urban and transportation planning in North America and Europe and argues the old idea which bounded transportation and communication A real environmentalist effort in traffic planning should begin from new technologies and from the analysis of citizens preferences A series of new projects are presented which include mobility demand reduction and focus on democracy in planning
