Abstract Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of self-reported mental health problems in a community sample of young adults. Methods: A cross-sectional survey of 1,000 young adults (18-24 years) was conducted. The survey included a validated self-report measure of mental health problems. Results: The prevalence of self-reported mental health problems was 12.5%. The most common self-reported mental health problems were anxiety disorders (5.5%), depression (4.5%), and substance use disorders (2.5%). Conclusions: The prevalence of self-reported mental health problems in this community sample of young adults is higher than previously reported rates. This suggests that mental health problems are more prevalent in this population than previously reported.
