The Transmission Of Knowledge In Medieval Cairo:

The Transmission of Knowledge in Medieval Cairo Jonathan Porter Berkey, 2014-07-14 In rich detail Jonathan Berkey interprets the social and cultural consequences of Islam's regard for knowledge showing how education in the Middle Ages played a central part in the religious experience of nearly all Muslims Focusing on Cairo which under Mamluk rule 1250-1517 was a vital intellectual center with a complex social system the author describes the transmission of religious knowledge there as a highly personal process one dependent on the relationships between individual scholars and students The great variety of institutional structures he argues supported educational efforts without ever becoming essential to them By not being locked into formal channels religious education was never exclusively for the elite but was open to all Berkey explores the varying educational opportunities offered to the full run of the Muslim population including Mamluks women and the common people Drawing on medieval chronicles biographical dictionaries and treatises on education as well as the deeds of endowment that established many of Cairo's schools he explains how education drew groups of outsiders into the cultural center and forged a common Muslim cultural identity Originally published in 1992 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905

Globalization of Knowledge in the Post-Antique Mediterranean, 700-1500 Sonja Brentjes, Jürgen Renn, 2016-05-05 The contributions to this volume enter into a dialogue about the routes modes and institutions that transferred and transformed knowledge across the late antique Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf Each contribution not only presents a different case study but also investigates a different type of question ranging from how history writing drew on cross culturally constructed stories and shared sets of skills and values to how an ancient warlord was transformed into the iconic hero of a newly created monotheistic religion Between these two poles the emergence of a new knowledge related but market based profession in Baghdad is discussed alongside the long distance transfer of texts doctrines and values within a religious minority community from the shores of the Caspian Sea to the mountains of the southern Arabian Peninsula The authors also investigate the outsourcing of military units and skills across religious and political boundaries the construction of cross cultural knowledge territory The Living and the Dead in Islam: Epitaphs as texts Werner Diem, Marco Schöller, 2004 The New Cambridge History of Islam: Volume 4, Islamic Cultures and Societies to the End of the Eighteenth Century Robert Irwin, 2010-11-04 Robert Irwin's authoritative introduction to the fourth volume of The New Cambridge History of Islam offers a panoramic vision of Islamic culture from its origins to around 1800. The introductory chapter which highlights key developments and introduces some of Islam's most famous protagonists paves the way for an extraordinarily varied collection of essays. The themes treated include religion and law, conversion, Islam's relationship with the natural world, governance and politics, caliphs and kings, philosophy, science, medicine, language, art, architecture, literature, music, and even cookery. What emerges from this rich collection written by an international team of experts is the diversity and dynamism of the societies which created this flourishing civilization. Volume four of The New Cambridge History of Islam serves as a thematic companion to the three preceding politically oriented volumes and in coverage extends across the pre-modern Islamic world.

The Book in Mamluk Egypt and Syria (1250-1517) Doris Behrens-Abouseif, 2018-10-08 This book is the first to date to be dedicated to the circulation of the book as a commodity in the Mamluk sultanate. It discusses the impact of princely patronage on the production of books, the formation and management of libraries in religious institutions, their size and their physical setting. It documents the significance of private collections and their interaction with institutional libraries and the role of charitable endowments, waqf, in the life of libraries. The market as a venue of intellectual and commercial exchanges and a production centre is explored with references to prices and fees. The social and professional background of scribes and calligraphers occupies a major place in this study which also documents the chain of master calligraphers over the entire Mamluk period. For her study the author relies on biographical dictionaries, chronicles, waqf documents and manuscripts.

Islam in South Asia Jamal Malik, 2020-04-06 Islam in South Asia: Revised, Enlarged and Updated, Second Edition traces the roots and development of Muslim presence in South Asia. Trajectories of normative notions of state building and the management of diversity are elaborated in four clusters augmented by topical subjects in excursions and annexes offering an array of Muslim voices. The enormous time span from 650 to 2019 provides for a comprehensive and plural canvas of the religious self-presentation of South Asian Muslims. Making use of the latest academic works and historical materials including first-hand accounts ranging from official statements to poetry, Malik convincingly argues that these texts provide sufficient evidence to arrive at an interpretation of quite a different character. With major and substantial revisions, changes, abridgements and additions follow the academic literature produced during the last decades. Higher Education and the Growth of Knowledge Michael Segre, 2015-07-24 This book sketches the history of higher education in parallel with the development of science Its goal is to draw attention to the historical tensions between the aims of higher education and those of science in the hope of contributing to improving the contemporary university A helpful tool in analyzing these intellectual and social tensions is Karl Popper s philosophy of science demarcating science and its social context Popper defines a society that encourages criticism as open and argues convincingly that an open society is the most appropriate one for the growth of science A closed society on the other hand is a tribal and dogmatic society Despite being the universal home of science today the university as an institution that is thousands of years old carries traces of different past cultural social and educational traditions The book argues that by and large the university was and still is a closed society and does not serve the best interests of the development of science and of students education

The Second Formation of Islamic Law Guy Burak, 2015-01-12 The Second Formation of Islamic Law is the first book to deal with the rise of an official school of law in the post Mongol period The author explores how the Ottoman dynasty shaped the structure and doctrine of a particular branch within the Hanafi school of law. In addition, the book examines the opposition of various jurists, mostly from the empire's Arab provinces, to this development. By looking at the emergence of the concept of an official school of law, the book seeks to call into question the grand narratives of Islamic legal history that tend to see the nineteenth century as the major rupture. Instead, an argument is formed that some of the supposedly nineteenth-century developments, such as the codification of Islamic law, are rooted in much earlier centuries. In so doing, the book offers a new periodization of Islamic legal history in the eastern Islamic lands.
