dependent cells or T cells in the generation of a successful immune response was first realized in the early sixties In the following two decades a succession of elegant experiments established the antigen specificity of T cells and their ability to perform both as regulatory and effector cells T cells were shown to be essential in most immune reactions playing a crucial role in augmenting the activity of effector T and B cells against foreign antigen as well as in the suppression of effector activity against self antigens The means by which T cells differentiate foreign from self antigens is based on their recognition of antigen almost exclusively in the context of self major histocompatibility complex products unlike B cells which recognize an antigen alone It is this recognition mediated by the T cell receptor that sets into motion the diverse cell cell interactions which control the differentiation and regulation of the immune response Although its importance was well established the molecular nature of the T cell receptor remained elusive for two decades Many hypotheses as to its structure and precise function were put forward using immunoglobulin as a basis for conjecture but the Holy Grail of Immunology remained ephemeral until three years ago In the ensuing years both immunologists and molecular biologists have contributed to an explosion of data unsurpassed by any previous period in the field T Cell Receptors Owen Simpson Bell, 1995 T cell receptors is a comprehensive treatise on the T cell receptor It deals with the TCR protein its functional interactions with the signal transduction machinery of the T cell and with the structure and organization of the TCR genes It is the only
