By C Sainte Rose As we stand at the dawn of the 21st century one may ponder the rationale of writing a book on spina bifida Once commonplace in European countries prior to the era of ultrasonography this disease became increasingly rare in developed countries as a sult of improvements in antenatal diagnosis to the point that we believed it to be d appearing Knowledge of spina bifida and of its treatment once so richly diffused ly 30 years ago began to fade Young neurosurgeons who had never seen such a m formation at its initial presentation were hesitant and did not understand the protean clinical signs of these patients presenting to the emergency department or outpatient clinics This situation however did not last for long As a consequence of the poli cal and economic events of the final years of the 20th century the advent of globa sation and the significant desire for immigration we realised that spina bifida had not disappeared at all in the rest of the world Migration was and is bringing it back to our doorstep to our everyday clinical and surgical practice It is important the fore not to lose the knowledge gained by our masters to try and assemble it in one place in order to understand the disease from its inception in utero through until adu hood and the reproductive age Pee, Poop, and Potty Training Alison urinary and fecal incontinence that affects social participation and quality of life negatively. In newborns with SD, early detection of neurogenic bladder dysfunction and determination of post void residual urine are required to determine the need of clean intermittent catheterization (CIC) and follow up. The non-invasive method of four-hour voiding observation with provocation test (VOP) was used to evaluate bladder function in 50 newborn children with SD. Voiding patterns for the children were described and compared with those of 50 healthy newborns evaluated with VOP in an earlier study. Comparison revealed significant differences among several variables. In particular, leakage at provocation test and not voiding with a stream were common in newborns with SD but did not occur in healthy newborns. VOP is a non-invasive standardized method to determine residual urine in newborns with SD. It also adds information on voiding pattern frequency, voiding with a stream, and leakage at provocation. Findings in neonatal VOP of the same cohort of newborns with SD were then related to radiology, presence of urinary tract infections during the first year, and urodynamic findings and use of CIC at the age of one year. It was found that in children with SD, not voiding with a stream may have a predictive value for the need of CIC at the age of one year, followed probably by lifelong CIC. Despite this, the presence of an open SD per se has stronger predictive value, and each child needs to be evaluated individually while considering a number of factors. The main value of VOP may be as a structured non-invasive screening method to uncover neurogenic bladder sphincter dysfunction in the newborn. Studies with a larger number of subjects than the present are needed to evaluate the potential of VOP in newborns with closed spinal dysraphism in whom the neurological consequences vary. A retrospective analysis detected renal damage on DMSA scintigraphy in 5 of 41 children with SD who were followed according to a proactive national program with minimal use of surgery. Median follow-up time was 10 years. High baseline pressure was confirmed as a risk factor for renal damage. Compliance with treatment and follow-up is likely to be an important factor for renal health. Therefore, efforts to support children and their families are crucial. A questionnaire-based study of 107 children with SD, age 6–16 years in Sweden and Norway, examined aspects of treatment for neurogenic bowel dysfunction, focusing on incontinence, independence, general satisfaction, and quality of life. It was found that transanal irrigation (TAI) and antegrade colonic enemas (ACE) are effective treatments but are time-consuming and difficult to perform independently. The majority of children using TAI (72%) and ACE (63%) never went to the toilet alone to empty their bowels. As children achieving independence on the toilet reported higher quality of life, efforts to support independence are beneficial. Continent self-managing children with healthy kidneys enjoy high quality of life and contribute more fully to society. Therefore, further research is required to investigate and develop existing and new technologies and methods that mitigate the problems related to SD and to make them accessible to all children with spinal dysraphism.

Under de senaste 50 åren har det skett en enastående utveckling av mjäligheterna för barn som föds med ryggmärgsbräck. Tidigare har majoriteten av barn med ryggmärgsbräck avlidit redan som småbarn, men idag verlever de flesta till vuxen ålder. Utan aktiva insatser och uppföljning är dock risken för medicinska problem och allvarlig påverkan på livet mycket stor. Nu när nästan alla barn verlever ligger fokus på att också öka livskvalitet och självständighet för personer med ryggmrgsbräck. Nstan alla med ryggmrgsbräck måste hantera en allvarlig påverkan på blås och tarmen med risk för njurskador, inkontinens och förstoppning. I avhandlingens två första studier valde vi en metod att med minimalt obehag för barnet bedöma blåsfunktionen. Detta för att kunna skilja ut de barn som behöver genomgå mer avancerade undersökningar och hjälpa med blåstömningen genom tåttappningar med kateter. Så kallad ren intermittent kateterisering (RIK). När vi jämförde resultatet av testet för 50 nyfödda med ryggmrgsbräck med samma undersökning av 50 friska nyfödda fann vi stora skillnader. Mest tydligt var att de flesta nyfödda med ryggmrgsbräck 69% men inga friska nyfödda läckte urin när man tryckte på blåsan. Av nyfödda med ryggmrgsbräck kissade de flesta 74% inte med ströle vilket alla friska nyfödda gjorde. Att inte kissa med ströle talade också starkt för att barnet skulle komma att behöva hjälp med RIK för att tömma blåsan vid ett års ålder och där sannolikt livet ut. Sammantaget visade avhandlingens två första arbeten att den metod för bedömning av blåsfunktion vi undersökt kan användas för att styra uppföljning och behandling av nyfödda med ryggmrgsbräck. Avhandlingens tredje studie visade att aktiv uppföljning av barnen enligt ett nationellt vårdprogram lyckades förhindra njurskador hos de flesta men att höga tryck i urinblåsan och återkommande urinvägsgsinfektioner ökade risken för skador. Våra familjernas förslag är att i en pressad vardag klara av att genomföra de ofta krävande behandlingar och undersökningar som rekommenderas verkade vara viktig för att förhindra njurskador. Stötning av familjerna är därför viktig. Avhandlingens fjärde arbete berörde tarmen som nästan alltid påverkas vid ryggmrgsbräck med risk för svår förstoppning och avföringsläckage. Detta har påtaglig påverkan på barnen och deras familjer. En tredjedel av de 107 familjerna i vår enkätundersökning i Sverige och Norge barn 6-16 år beskrev att man fått avstå från aktiviteter såsom resor på grund av barnets tarmproblem och de barn som hade avföringsläckage rapporterade tydligt lägre livskvalitet än andra. Trots denna allvarliga påverkan finns det hittills inga studier som jämför de olika behandlingarna som barnet kan använda. I vår enkät kartlade vi därför vilka metoder som användes och hur bra de fungerade. Vi ställde frågor till både barn och föräldrar särskilt om avföringsläckage hur ofta man var med metoden, barnens livskvalitet och självständighet på toaletten. Det var utifrån svaren tydligt att både de vanligaste typerna av tarmsköljning var effektiva men tidskrävande och svåra för barn och ungdomar att klara att utföra på egen hand. Ingen metod visade sig vara gänsen den andra men de barn som klarade att sköta tarmtömningen själva skattade sin livskvalitet klart högre än andra. Vi drar därför slutsatsen att det är viktigt att vårdpersonal diskuterar de olika behandlingsalternativen med barn och föräldrar och tillsammans med dem väljer den metod som passar det enskilda barnet bäst. Det skapas bästa förutsättningar för att gemensamt arbeta vidare för att uppnå största möjliga självständighet. Självständiga individer med friska njurar och utan urin och avföringsinkontinens upplever högre livskvalitet och behöver mindre sjukvård och andra samhällsinsatser. Det behövs mer forskning för att utveckla existerande och nya metoder att hantera de allvarliga komplikationer som riskerar att drabba barn och vuxna med ryggmrgsbräck.
