The Governance of Urban Green Spaces in the EU Judith Schicklinski, 2017-04-28 Across European cities the use of urban space is controversial and subject to diverging interests On the one hand citizens are increasingly aware of the necessity for self organising to reclaim green spaces On the other hand local authorities have started to involve citizens in the governance of urban green spaces While an increased level of citizen participation and conducive conditions for citizens self organisation are a desirable development per se the risk of functionalising civil society actors by the local authority for neoliberal city development must be kept in mind Drawing on qualitative and quantitative data collected in 29 European cities from all four European geographic regions this book examines the governance of urban green spaces and urban food production focusing on the contribution of citizen driven activities Over the course of the book Schicklinski identifies best

Global Justice, Global Institutions Daniel M. Weinstock,2007 Defining the principles of justice that ought to govern the global economic and political sphere is one of the most urgent tasks that contemporary political philosophers face But they must also contribute to working through the institutional implications of these principles How might principles of global justice be realised Must the institutions that aim to implement them be transnational or can global justice be attained within the context of the state system Can institutions of democratic self governance be imagined beyond the nation state These are just some of the questions that still face political philosophers even when issues of abstract principle have been addressed

This volume establishes a dialogue between philosophers working at all levels of abstraction Some of the authors are concerned with the grounds and scope of the obligations that bind the citizens and governments of rich countries to those of poorer nations But many examine the question of how these obligations can be satisfied both within existing institutional frameworks and beyond Together their essays constitute a major contribution to the advancement of both the theoretical understanding and the practical requirements of global justice Social Justice and Individual Ethics in an Open Society

Frank Vandenbroucke,2001-03-13 Can the need for incentives justify inequality Starting from this question Frank

Vandenbroucke examines a conception of justice in which both equality and responsibility are involved. In the first part of the inquiry which explores the implementation of that conception of justice, the justification of incentives assumes that agents make personal choices based only upon their own interests. The second part of the book challenges the idea that a normative conception of distributive justice can be based on that traditional assumption, i.e. that personal choices are not the subject matter of justice. Thus Vandenbroucke questions the Rawlsian idea that the primary subject of a theory of justice is the basic structure of society and not the individual conduct of its citizens. For a society to be really just, the ethos of individual conduct has to serve justice. Non-mathematical readers can skip the formal model proposed in Chapter 3 and understand the rest of the book.
