

The Red Flags Early Identification Guide (for children aged birth to five years) is a health resource for professionals (including general practitioners, child health nurses, allied health professionals and early childhood educators) working with families, to help identify developmental concerns early, so families can receive support from the right professionals at the right time.

Can this facilitate conversation about a plan of action and achieve the objective of more detailed developmental targets and/or performance?

The negative statements of "does not..." and "not able to..." have been used to highlight a delay/lack of acquisition of skills. The red flags have been linked to the absence or delay of skills which lie at the boundary of the typical developmental range. Therefore the guide should not be used as a "milestones" screen, as the red flags are not developmental milestones.

Now and your child together, get down on their level and enjoy being together.

- Give your learners, such as, listen and look at objects (e.g., teddy, leaves and toy) and talk about their own child models, youth and adult objects
- Go out and about, go to libraries, talk about books, visit parks – climb, throw and kick balls, ride a bike
- Give and problems solve, e.g. with counters
- Use imagination, play out simple ideas and gradually introduce different characters or roles, play with dolls, teddies, figures etc., creatively use boxes or containers as play objects (e.g. as a car)
- Explorer use a variety of things for their objects: explore and play with e.g. balloons, paint and pins, play clay, your cupboards are full of exciting things!
