

Managing earth life: Some earth life, especially soil life, is of enormous importance for soil health, and with this, the plant's future growth, health and food value. The growth of, for example, 1 gram more rootlengths (per plant) can elongate roots from the (very) low levels, and thereby, feeding more plants (instead of the other way round) and therefore the more food is being grown. However, rootlengths (and/or the roots) in the medium, and growth factors
