We Are Here Memories Of The Lithuanian Holocaust:

We Are Here Ellen Cassedy, 2012-03-01 Ellen Cassedy's longing to recover the Yiddish she'd lost with her mother's death eventually led her to Lithuania once the Jerusalem of the North. As she prepared for her journey, her uncle, sixty years after he'd left Lithuania in a boxcar, made a shocking disclosure about his wartime experience, and an elderly man from her ancestral town made an unsettling request. Gradually, what had begun as a personal journey broadened into a larger exploration of how the people of this country, Jews and non-Jews alike, are confronting their past in order to move forward into the future. How does a nation, how do successor generations, moral beings, overcome a bloody past? How do we judge the bystanders, collaborators, perpetrators, rescuers, and ourselves? These are the questions Cassedy confronts in We Are Here, one woman's exploration of Lithuania's Jewish history combined with a personal exploration of her own family's place in it. Digging through archives with the help of a local whose motives are puzzling to her, interviewing natives including an old man who wants to speak to a Jew before he dies, discovering the complications encountered by a country that endured both Nazi and Soviet occupation, Cassedy finds that it's not just the facts of history that matter but what we choose to do with them.

So We Died Levi Shalit, 2024 So We Died (Azoy zaynen mir geshtorbn) is a translation from the Yiddish of a powerful eyewitness account of life in the Shavli (Šavliai) Lithuania ghetto from 1941 to 1944. For two and a half years, 5,000 Jews were confined in the ghetto in Shavli (Šavliai), Lithuania's third biggest city, which is located between Kovno (Kaunas) to the south and Riga (Latvia) to the north. In contrast to other key European ghettos, few documents survive from the Shavli ghetto. Three accounts of the Shavli ghetto years exist; yet to date, none has been published in English. Among these accounts, Levi Shalit's stands out for its power, beauty, and vision. Shalit was a true literary stylist who sought to convey the story of the ghetto with nuance and vibrancy. He was an acute psychological observer who wrestled with profound questions about the human condition. His work offers unique insights into the motivations, the inner and outer conflicts, and the desperate challenges facing his community. His unflinching honesty takes us to the heart of issues that matter deeply for our understanding of the Holocaust and of ourselves. Composed shortly after the war, Shalit's account proceeds not day by day but through a carefully constructed set of themes and a series of stories. Shalit's intention was not simply to document the events he lived through but to present them in compelling story form. His work is a model of remembrance and witnessing.

Section One, Oh Israel, People of Faith, begins with the German invasion in June of 1941 and describes the start of the occupation with its executions, restrictions, prohibitions, and humiliations, and the massacre carried out by Germans and Lithuanians throughout the country during July and August. The section concludes with the transfer of Shavli's 5,000 surviving Jews into the ghetto. Section Two, So We Lived, describes ghetto life in all its facets: the overarching German command, the Lithuanian administration, and the Jewish council that oversaw food distribution, housing, labor, education, a synagogue, a police force, and other social structures. Internal discipline, quarrels, and contact with authorities and Lithuanian neighbors are also described. This section contains a series of stories featuring individual characters Section Three The Masada Book describes the attempts to organize an underground resistance group in which Shalit was an active participant Section Four The Community Dies begins with the transformation of the ghetto into a concentration camp and includes the seizure and deportation of the ghetto's children The section ends with the ghetto's liquidation and the journey to the Stutthof concentration camp from which most of the Jewish men were taken to Dachau

The Girl from Human Street Roger Cohen, 2015-01-13 An intimate and profoundly moving Jewish family history a story of displacement prejudice hope despair and love In this luminous memoir award winning New York Times columnist Roger Cohen turns a compassionate yet discerning eye on the legacy of his own forebears As he follows them across continents and decades mapping individual lives that diverge and intertwine vital patterns of struggle and resilience valued heritage and evolving loyalties religious ethnic national converge into a resonant portrait of cultural identity in the modern age Beginning in the nineteenth century and continuing through to the present day Cohen tracks his family's story of repeated upheaval from Lithuania to South Africa and then to England the United States and Israel It is a tale of otherness marked by overt and latent anti-Semitism but also otherness as a sense of inheritance. We see Cohen's family members grow roots in each adopted homeland even as they struggle to overcome the loss of what is left behind and to adapt to the racism his parents witness in apartheid era South Africa to the familiar ostracism an uncle from Johannesburg faces after fighting against Hitler across Europe to the ambivalence an Israeli cousin experiences when tasked with policing the occupied West Bank. At the heart of The Girl from Human Street is the powerful and touching relationship between Cohen and his mother that girl. Tortured by the upheavals in her life yet stoic in her struggle she embodies her son's complex inheritance. Graceful, honest and sweeping, Cohen's remarkable chronicle of the quest for belonging across generations contributes an important chapter to the ongoing narrative of Jewish life.

Talking Book Topics, 2015-11. Responsa from the Holocaust Efraim Oshry, 2001. This breathtakingly moving book documents the remarkable continuity of religious life under the horrendous conditions of Nazi-occupied Lithuania. The Jews of the Kovno ghetto went to Rabbi Ephraim Oshry, one of the remaining religious authorities in the ghetto, and posed their questions to him. He answered their questions and recorded each and every query by copying it onto scraps that he tore off of cement sacks. He then buried these scraps of papers in cans in the soil around the ghetto. This book brings to light these unearthed questions and answers and bears witness to the power of faith to survive in the most dire of circumstances.
