Methods and Sports Science Paul Salmon, Neville Anthony Stanton, Adam Gibbon, Daniel Jenkins, Guy H. Walker, 2009-12-09 During the course of any sporting event critical cognitive and physical tasks are performed within a dynamic complex collaborative system comprising multiple humans and artifacts under pressurized complex and rapidly changing conditions. Highly skilled well trained individuals walk a fine line between task success and failure with only slight margins for error. Rapid Modelling for Increasing Competitiveness Gerald Reiner, 2009-06-13 A Perspective on Two Decades of Rapid Modeling. It is an honor for me to be asked to write a foreword to the Proceedings of the 1st Rapid Modeling Conference. In 1987 when I coined the term Rapid Modeling to denote queueing modeling of manufacturing systems I never imagined that two decades later there would be an international conference devoted to this topic. I am delighted to see that there will be around 40 presentations at the conference by leading researchers from around the world and about half of these presentations are represented by written papers published in this book. I congratulate the conference organizers and program committee on the success of their efforts to hold the first ever conference on Rapid Modeling. Attendees at this conference might find it interesting to learn about the history of the term Rapid Modeling in the context it is used here. During the fall of 1986 I was invited to a meeting at the Headquarters of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers (SME) in Dearborn, Michigan. By that time I had successfully demonstrated several industry applications of queueing network models at leading manufacturers in the USA. Although in principle the use of queueing networks to model manufacturing systems was well known in the OR/MS community and many papers had been published, the actual use of such models by manufacturing professionals was almost nonexistent.
