Doctoral Education in Social Work Jeane W. Anastas, 2012-01-25 Doctoral education in social work is said to be in crisis While there is a glut of available programs there is a shortage of doctoral graduates for faculty positions in social work education requiring that the field prepare more high quality graduates for these positions There is also an increasing need for doctoral level social workers in leadership roles outside of schools of social work such as in think tanks professional associations public and organizational administration and practice Based on findings from a national survey of doctoral students in social work this volume discusses the purpose of doctoral education in a practice profession as well as past and current controversies about what that should be Survey findings about student demographics and their reasons for seeking the doctoral degree are discussed in comparison to national data from related fields In addition their program experiences are considered and parsed including specifics on what they like and do not like such as the dissertation research and writing experience and preparation for the PhD job market While most programs are designed to prepare stewards of the discipline

it turns out that the resources available in social work doctoral programs including student aid are quite variable The book identifies a variety of recommendations that can enhance the profession's ability to prepare the next generation of intellectual leadership This is essential reading for anyone interested in or already working towards a social work doctorate and for faculty and directors of schools of social work determined to understand and shape the future of doctoral education in social work

Building Research Culture and Infrastructure Ruth

G. McRoy, Jerry P. Flanzer, Joan Levy Zlotnik, 2012-01-25 Social work education programs at all levels are challenged to enhance their research culture and infrastructure. Since the 1991 NIMH supported Task Force on Social Work Research report called for increasing research development in social work education programs, schools of social work have worked to develop research supportive climates. This has helped social work scholars contribute to the knowledge base through the publication of original research, the expansion of the quantity and quality of faculty and student research endeavors, and the development of more empirically validated treatment approaches. Drawing on the extensive experience of the authors, this book provides a roadmap to building research capacity. It outlines specific leadership strategies that deans and directors can use to access federal research funds, incentivize interdisciplinary research, enhance mentorship relationships between senior and junior researchers, and make strategic hires. The book also identifies specific strategies to promote research by junior faculty and graduate students, forge partnerships between the university and local community, and state agencies identify potential grant funders and write successful grants. Deans, directors, faculty, research administrators, and doctoral students will find this book a valuable step by step guide for fostering a research climate and increasing the likelihood of developing successful research initiatives.
