results of this transformational process have been well identified and evidenced their hermeneutic interpretation greatly suffers from the neglect of a methodologically updated investigation of the images conceptual underpinning Valerie Gonzalez addresses this lacuna by exploring the operations of cross fertilization at the level of imagistic conceptualization resulting from the multifaceted encounter between the local legacy of Indo Persianate book art the freshly imported Persian models to Mughal India after 1555 and the influx of European art at the Mughal court in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries The author's close examination of the visuality metaphysical order and aesthetic language of Mughal imagery and portraiture sheds new light on this particular aspect of its aesthetic hybridity which is usually approached monolithically as a historical phenomenon of cross cultural interaction That approach fails to consider specific parameters and features inherent to the artistic practice such as the differences between doxis and praxis conceptualization and realization intentionality and what lies beyond it By studying the distinct phases and principles of hybridization between the variegated pictorial sources at work in the Mughal creative process at the successive levels of the project intention the practice realization and the result product the author deciphers the modalities of appropriation and manipulation of the heterogeneous elements Her unique

Colb takes these questions at face value and also delves deeply into the motivations behind them coming up with answers that are not only intelligent but insightful about human nature Through examples case studies and clear eyed logic she provides arguments for everything from why veganism is compatible with the world's major religions to why vegetarianism is not enough In the end she shows how it is possible for vegans and non vegans to engage in a mutually beneficial conversation without descending into counterproductive name calling and to work together to create a more hospitable world for human animals and non human animals alike A rare fusion of passion and logic idealism and pragmatism style and substance and in its measured confrontation of the most challenging questions vegans face a revolutionary guide for advocates seeking to engage the ethics of eating animals through authentic dialogue rather than bombastic rhetoric Colb
