Harmon,2003-11-17 In Every Knee Should Bow Steven Harmon explores the manner in which Clement of Alexandria ca 160 215 C E Origen ca 185 ca 251 C E and Gregory of Nyssa 331 340 ca 395 C E appealed to Scripture in developing rationales for their concepts of apokatastasis the hope that all rational creatures will ultimately be reconciled to God Harmon argues that these patristic universalists maintained their hope for a wideness in God s mercy primarily because they believed this hope was the most coherent reading of the biblical story Although Hellenistic thought might also have suggested an eschatology in which the end corresponds to the beginning the eschatologies of these ancient Christian theologians were shaped mainly by the Hebrew story of creation fall redemption and consummation read through the lenses of the church s experience of God s saving work in the person of Jesus Christ These early attempts to take seriously the biblical story s affirmations of the divine intention to save all people on the one hand and of judgment and hell on the other have a certain timeless relevance In a context not unlike that of the late antique Christian world the postmodern church again wrestles with these tensions in the biblical story in the midst of religious pluralism The New Encyclopaedia Britannica: Macropaedia : Knowledge in depth ,2003 Books in Print ,1994
