Trainspotting Mark Renton Series 2:

Trainspotting Murray Smith, 2019-07-25 In 1996 Trainspotting was the biggest thing in British culture. Brilliantly and aggressively marketed, it crossed into the mainstream despite being a black comedy set against the backdrop of heroin addiction in Edinburgh. Produced by Andrew MacDonald, scripted by John Hodge, and directed by Danny Boyle, the team behind Shallow Grave (1994). Trainspotting was an adaptation of Irvine Welsh's barbed novel of the same title. The film is crucial for understanding British culture in the context of devolution and the rise of Cool Britannia. Murray Smith unpicks the processes that led to the film's enormous success. He isolates various factors: the film's eclectic soundtrack, its depiction of Scottish identity, its attitude to deprivation, drugs, and violence, its traffic with American cultural forms, its synthesis of realist and fantastic elements, and its complicated relationship to heritage that make Trainspotting such a vivid document of its time.

Introducing Bakhtin Sue Vice, 1997 The Russian critic and theorist Mikhail Bakhtin is once again in favor, his influence spreading across many discourses including literature, film, cultural, and gender studies. This book provides the most comprehensive introduction to Bakhtin's central concepts and terms. Sue Vice illustrates what is meant by such ideas as carnival, the grotesque body, dialogism, and heteroglossia. These concepts are then placed in a contemporary context by drawing out the implications of Bakhtin's writings for current issues such as feminism and sexuality. Vice's examples are always practically based on specific texts such as the film Thelma and Louise, Helen Zahavi's Dirty

Weekend and James Kelman's How late it was how late Against Life Alastair Hunt, Stephanie Youngblood, 2016-03-15
The contributors to Against Life think critically about the turn to life in recent theory and culture. Editors Alastair Hunt and Stephanie Youngblood shape their collection to provocatively challenge the assumption rife throughout the humanities that life needs to be cultivated, affirmed, and redeemed. The editors and their contributors explore how we might be better off daring to think ethics and politics as well as the project of the humanities in more radical terms as a refusal to choose life. What forms of equality and freedom might emerge if we did not organize being together under signs of life? Taken together, the essays in Against Life mark an important turn in the ethico-political work of the humanities.

Television Aesthetics and Style Steven Peacock, Jason Jacobs, 2013-07-04
Although Film Studies has successfully returned attention to matters of style and interpretation, its sibling discipline has left the territory uncharted until now. The question of how television operates on a stylistic level has been critically underexplored despite being fundamental to our viewing experience. This significant new work redresses a vital gap in Television Studies by engaging with the stylistic dynamics of TV, exploring the aesthetic properties and values of both the medium and particular types of output, specific programmes, and raising important questions about the way we judge television as both cultural artifact and art form. Television Aesthetics and Style provides a unique and vital intervention in the field, raising key questions about television's artistic properties and possibilities. Through a series of case studies by internationally renowned scholars, the collection takes a radical step forward in understanding TV's stylistic achievements.

Feeling British Evan Gottlieb, 2007
Feeling British argues that the discourse of sympathy both encourages and problematizes a sense of shared national identity in eighteenth-century and Romantic British literature and culture. Although the 1707 Act of Union officially joined England and Scotland, government policy alone could not overcome centuries of feuding and ill will between these nations. Accordingly, the literary public sphere became a vital arena for the development and promotion of a new national identity. Britishness: Feeling British starts by examining the political implications of the Scottish Enlightenment's theorizations of sympathy, the mechanism by which emotions are shared between people. From these philosophical beginnings, this study tracks how sympathetic discourse is deployed by a variety of authors, including Defoe, Smollett, Johnson, Wordsworth, and Scott, invested in constructing but also in questioning an inclusive sense of what it means to be British.

Speaking in Tongues: Language Across Contexts and Users Luis Pérez González, 2003
Speaking in Tongues, the second volume of the English in the World series, places the reader at the heart of investigations into the nature and process of translation in an internationalized scenario where the consolidation of multilateral institutions and multinational corporations struggle between globalization and localization. The information and communication technologies are both the means to enhance translation productivity and the main source of jobs for professional translators. The new media and communication technologies provide a whole range of ways to interact with others both in leisure and academic settings. The scope of the book ranges from Systemic Functional Linguistics to Discourse

Analysis from Intercultural Rhetoric to Poststructuralism The collection of articles has been edited to recognise the range of perspectives looking to this field and is of direct interest both to any linguist translator or other social scientist working in the study of interlingual communication and to those designing and buying translation technologies for professional purposes
