translated novels just as they are distinct from the originals from which they are derived but they are neither secondary nor inferior. They provide different models of reality; they are split apart by two languages, two cultures and two literary systems and they are characterized by cultural hybridity, double voicing and multiple intertextualities. With the continued popularity of translated fiction, questions related to its reading and reception take on increasing significance. Chan draws on insights from textual and narratological studies to unravel the processes through which readers interact with translated fiction. Moving from individual readings to collective reception, he considers how lay Chinese readers as a community received translated British fiction at specific historical moments during the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries. Case studies discussed include translations of stream of consciousness novels, fantasy fiction and postmodern works. In addition to lay readers, two further kinds of reader with bilingual facility are examined: the way critics and historians approach translated fiction is investigated from structuralist and poststructuralist perspectives. A range of novels by well-known British authors constitute the core of the study, including novels by Oscar Wilde, James Joyce, D. H. Lawrence, Virginia Woolf, John Fowles, Helen Fielding and J. K. Rowling.

Multilingual China Bob Adamson, Anwei Feng, 2021-12-27. Multilingual China explores the dynamics of multilingualism in one of the most multilingual countries in the world. This edited collection comprises frontline empirical research into a range of important issues that arise from the presence of 55 official ethnic minority groups plus China's search to modernize and strengthen the nation's place in the world order. Topics focus on the dynamics of national ethnic minority and foreign languages in use, policy making and education inside China and beyond. Micro studies of language contact and variation are included, as are chapters dealing with multilingual media and linguistic landscapes. The book highlights tensions such as threats to the sustainability of weak languages and dialects, the role and status of foreign languages, especially English, and how Chinese can be presented as a viable regional or international language. Multilingual China will appeal to academics and researchers working in multilingualism and multilingual education as well as sinologists keen to examine the interplay of languages in this complex multilingual context.
