whose 300 mph winds were the fastest ever recorded Veteran journalist Nancy Mathis draws on many interviews to weave the story of those few terrifying hours that irrevocably changed the lives of many Oklahomans Storm Warning features Kara Wiese who fought to save her son from the fatal winds and Charlie Cusack who followed the tornado's progress on television until it came knocking on his front door Amazingly only thirty eight people perished at the hands of the Oklahoma F5 Many lives were saved by the efforts of professionals such as Ted Fujita the creator of the Fujita Scale and dubbed Mr Tornado for his relentless pursuit to unravel a twister's mysteries the oft criticized but dogged government meteorologists and Gary England a resourceful TV weatherman whose tireless efforts prepared hundreds of people in the tornado's path Tornado Tales Norma B. Smith,1987 Under the Whirlwind Jerrine Verkaik,Arjen Verkaik,2001 A lavishly illustrated full colour guide to tornadoes one of nature's most exciting phenomena this book documents the experiences of two storm chasers who have lived through tornadoes Myths and misconceptions pertaining to tornadoes are integrated with touching human stories of survival With hundreds of colour photographs and illustrations this book offers an exciting tour of the sky explaining what to expect before and during a tornado and showing the devastating aftermath Strange occurrences such as green sky and the roar of a tornado are explained Safety tips a guide to rebuilding for communities and suggestions to help people cope with the effects of a tornado round out this exceptional resource The Tornado T. P. Grazulis,2003 A guide to tornado formation and lifecycle also covers such topics as forecasting wind speeds tornado myths tornado safety risks and records along with accounts of the deadliest tornadoes in the United States To the Southwest Corner Rebecca Lynn Hoffman,OhioLINK Electronic Theses and Dissertations Center,2013 The origins of modern common tornado myths can be traced back as far as the late nineteenth century Since 1950 forecasting technology has evolved quickly and efficiently in 1950 tornadoes came with little to no warning and presently people can be warned as much as 24 hours in advance of an impending storm However the year 2011 produced the third largest death toll on record Educating the public is a daunting task when information is constantly changing especially when the public has pre conceived notions which may stem from tornado myths This study focused on the socio demographic factors behind these myths in an effort to become aware of which parts of the population need to be re educated on safety practices Surveys were sent to random home addresses in four U S metropolitan areas The results from a series of chi square tests revealed associations between gender and the belief that tornadoes are less likely to strike cities or near bodies of water The tests also revealed association between gender and the perceived regions in which people believe tornadoes occur most often Finally the tests revealed association between location of residence and the perceived regions in which people believe tornadoes occur While these were significant results it is difficult to target re education by gender and location alone It can be concluded that the general public would benefit greatly from re education in a manner which not only reaches the masses but from a method in which they are able to easily retain the information What Makes a Tornado Twist? Mary Kay Carson,2014 Is each snowflake unique What comes first thunder or lightning What causes the seasons Whatever the weather question a child has from sunshine to storms or snow the fascinating answers are right here Tornadoes Alvin Silverstein, Virginia Silverstein, 2009-07-01 Discusses the science behind tornadoes including how and where they form the scientific methods to track and predict them and tornado safety tips Provided by publisher
