Artificial Intelligence for

Learning Donald Clark, 2020-08-13 Artificial intelligence is creating huge opportunities for workplace learning and employee development. However, it can be difficult for L D professionals to assess what difference AI can make in their organization and where it is best implemented. Artificial Intelligence for Learning is the practical guide L D practitioners need to understand what AI is and how to use it to improve all aspects of learning in the workplace. It includes specific guidance on how AI can provide content curation and personalization to improve learner engagement, how it can be implemented to improve the efficiency of evaluation, assessment and reporting, and how chatbots can provide learner support to a global workforce. Artificial Intelligence for Learning debunks the myths and cuts through the hype around AI, allowing L D practitioners to feel confident in their ability to critically assess where artificial intelligence can make a measurable difference and where it is worth investing in. There is also critical discussion of how AI is an aid to learning and development, not a replacement, as well as how it can be used to boost the effectiveness of workplace learning, reduce drop off rates in online learning, and improve ROI. With real world examples from companies who have effectively implemented AI and seen the benefits, as well as case studies from organizations including Netflix, British Airways, and the NHS, this book is essential reading for all L D practitioners needing to understand AI and what it means in practice.

Dissecting Discrimination Daniel Villiger, 2021-08-28 This Open Access book examines the phenomenon of discrimination using a descriptive approach. Discrimination is omnipresent, whether it is people who discriminate against other people or, more recently, also machines that discriminate against people. The first part of the analysis employs decision theory on discrimination, leading to two fundamental subtypes: taste-based discrimination and statistical discrimination. The second part links taste-based discrimination to social identity theory, demonstrating that not all taste-based discrimination is ultimately statistical discrimination and revealing the evolutionary origins of our tastes. The third part surveys how people get their beliefs for statistical discrimination and thereby shows that they often deviate from

Bayesianism they have inherent prior beliefs and do not exclusively update their beliefs according to Bayes law Additionally the analysis of belief formation highlights the importance of the learning environment The last part reassembles the previously dissected aspects of discrimination presents a new descriptive model of discrimination and lists five implications for a normative theory of discrimination
