

The book cover features a whimsical illustration of a red newt with large white eyes and a smiling mouth, sitting on the back of a green turtle. The turtle is also smiling and has large white eyes. They are positioned in the center, surrounded by dense, stylized yellow and orange foliage. In the background, there are brown tree trunks and a small blue bird perched on a branch. The sky is a light blue. The title is written in a playful, hand-drawn font at the top.

Chemical Signals in Vertebrates 9 Anna Marchlewska-Koj,John J. Lepri,Dietland Müller-Schwarze,2012-12-06 It is generally accepted that the recent progress in molecular and cellular biology would not have been possible without an understanding of the mechanisms and signaling pathways of communication inside the cell and between various cells of the animal organism In fact a similar progress occurred in the field of chemical communication between individual organisms of vertebrate species and this volume is aimed at presenting the current state of the art on this subject The reader can find here both original results obtained in the laboratory or field studies and comprehensive reviews summarizing many years of research The presentations of over 60 scientists have been grouped according to their approach into nine parts covering such fields as ecological and evolutionary aspects of chemical communication structure and neuronal mechanisms of chemosensory systems chemical structure of pheromones and binding proteins kin individual and sexual recognition predator prey relationships purpose and consequences of marking behavior scent signals and reproductive processes Expanding on former volumes of this series entirely new chapters have been added on prenatal chemical communication describing specific effects of the intrauterine environment In many cases a truly multidisciplinary approach was required such as with the population analysis of polymorphic variants of the mouse s major urinary proteins that function in carrying pheromones
