

Create a letter you feel comfortable with and which expresses your individuality. Remember that the purpose of the letter is to get the employer's attention. Write for the ear, not the eye - write as you would speak. Read your writing aloud, and if it sounds awkward/unnatural, begin again.

The following is only a suggested format for the body of the letter. Use your own creativity to write the letter that best communicates your style.

NOTE: If you start your letter with Dear Sir/Madam (but remember, where possible, do try to find out the name of the person to whom it should be addressed), sign the letter Your faithfully. If you start with Dear "name" (avoid using the person's first name in a formal letter), sign the letter Yours sincerely.

process answering every question you might possibly have along the way Writing Qualitatively Johnny Salda, 2018-04-09 Writing Qualitatively The Selected Works of Johnny Salda showcases the diverse range of writing styles available to qualitative researchers through the work of one of the most internationally cited and referenced methodologists. The traditional academic journal article still holds its place as a convention of published scholarship but Salda illustrates how a variety of approaches to research documentation can evocatively represent social life and one's self in intriguing ways. Writing Qualitatively assembles journal articles, book chapters, ancillary materials, texts from keynote addresses and previously unpublished work that illustrate Salda's eclectic body of inquiry. Each piece is prefaced with author comments on the selection and how readers themselves might venture into comparable writing styles. Multiple methodologies and writing examples are included, ranging from case studies to action research, from poetry to ethnodramatic play scripts, from confessional tales to autoethnographies and from textbook materials to classroom session designs. An introduction to the collection discusses Salda's writing processes and how qualitative researchers and educators can extend their own imaginations and creativity to find new forms of scholarly presentation and representation. Writing Qualitatively serves as a supplemental text for undergraduate and graduate courses in qualitative inquiry, educational research, ethnography, and arts-based research. This unique anthology demonstrates to students, professors, and professional researchers how academic scholarship can be reported through a breadth of literary genres, elements, and styles.
