Resilient Cities in the Global South Lakshmi Priya Rajendran, Nez Hapi-Dellé Odeleye, Aysegul Can, 2025-07-22 Post pandemic cities face new challenges in adapting to global changes while also addressing the needs, practices and capabilities of diverse populations. Resilience as a key factor enables cities to adapt and transform in response to these challenges. Development driven by resilience is crucial for urban society's ability to adapt and evolve on multiple levels. However, in developed countries, increasingly standardised planning and development practices often hinder citizen engagement and participation, which are essential for building resilient cities. This book adopts an interdisciplinary approach to examine how diverse social and spatial behaviours within informal urban environments, particularly in developing countries, can provide fresh insights for robust urban planning and development. The book is structured in three parts: 1 North-South Relations, this part explores the global discourse on informality, highlighting its presence in both the Global North and South; 2 Grassroots, this part focusses on grassroots initiatives and community driven resilience within urban informality; and 3 Institutional Strategies and Professional Alliances, the final part delves into the role of institutions and professional collaborations in shaping urban informality. By presenting a range of perspectives and experiences, this book contributes to a unique Southern framework that positions informality as a dialogue for enabling resilience. It will appeal to a multidisciplinary audience including professionals from fields such as sociology, history, environmental psychology, cultural studies, human geography, urban design and planning, architecture and anthropology.

New Urban Spaces Neil Brenner, 2019-05-24 The urban condition is today being radically transformed. Urban restructuring is accelerating, new urban spaces are being consolidated, and new forms of urbanization are crystallizing. In New Urban Spaces, Neil Brenner argues that understanding these mutations of urban life requires not only concrete research but new theories of urbanization. To this end, Brenner proposes an approach that breaks with inherited conceptions of the urban as a bounded settlement unit, the city or the metropolis, and explores the multiscale constitution and periodic rescaling of the capitalist urban fabric. Drawing on critical geopolitical economy and spatialized approaches to state theory, Brenner offers a paradigmatic account of how rescaling processes are transforming inherited formations of urban space and their variegated consequences for emergent patterns and pathways of urbanization. The book also advances an understanding of critical urban theory as radically revisable: key urban concepts must be continually reinvented in relation to the relentlessly mutating worlds of urbanization they aspire to illuminate.

social polarisation hypothesis which is accepted by many is simply wrong in the case of Johannesburg Ultimately Crankshaw posits that the post Fordist post apartheid period is characterised by a completely new division of labour that has caused new forms of racial inequality That racial inequality in the post apartheid period is not the result of the persistence of apartheid era causes but is the result of new causes that have interacted with the historical effects of apartheid to produce new patterns of racial inequality gentrification This is another highly valuable contribution to China studies from the geographical perspective of the territorial politics at play in the process of urban village redevelopment which has fostered a new propertied landowning class as winners while moving low wage migrants The book takes the reader on a fascinating journey from peri urban villages to IT worker villages to artists villages revealing a restless landscape of urbanism and state centered governance as well as bottom up counterplots The fieldwork explores the contradictions of urban village redevelopment in Beijing On the one hand it is state dominated and yet creates new housing opportunities for migrants on the other it disrupts old orders but also encourages new forms of grassroots alliances The empirical studies of Beijing s urban villages enrich Henry Lefebvre s discourse on planetary urbanisation Gilles Deleuze and Félix Guattari s notion of the rhizome and Elinor Ostrom s ideas on the wise management of the commons

Urban Power Benjamin H. Bradlow, 2024-10-22 Why some cities are more effective than others at reducing inequalities in the built environment For the first time in history most people live in cities One in seven are living in slums the most excluded parts of cities in which the basics of urban life including adequate housing accessible sanitation and reliable transportation are largely unavailable Why are some cities more successful than others in reducing inequalities in the built environment In Urban Power Benjamin Bradlow explores this question examining the effectiveness of urban governance in two megacities in young democracies S o Paulo Brazil and Johannesburg South Africa Both cities came out of periods of authoritarian rule with similarly high inequalities and similar policy priorities to lower them And yet S o Paulo has been far more successful than Johannesburg in improving access to basic urban goods Bradlow examines the relationships between local government bureaucracies and urban social movements that have shaped these outcomes Drawing on sixteen months of fieldwork in both cities including interviews with informants from government agencies political leadership social movements private developers bus companies and water and sanitation companies Bradlow details the political and professional conflicts between and within movements governments private corporations and political parties He proposes a bold theoretical approach for a new global urban sociology that focuses on variations in the coordination of local governing power arguing that the concepts of embeddedness and cohesion explain processes of change that bridge external social mobilization and the internal coordinating capacity of local government to implement policy changes

Language and Social Structure in Urban France David Hornsby, 2017-07-05 The coming together of linguistics and sociology in the 1960 s most notably via the work of William Labov marked a revolution in the study of language and provided a paradigm for the understanding of variation and change Labovian quantitative methods have been employed successfully in North America the UK Scandinavia and New Zealand but have had surprisingly little resonance in France a country which poses many challenges to orthodox sociolinguistic thinking Why for example does a nation with unexceptional scores on income distribution and social mobility show an exceptionally high degree of linguistic levelling that is the elimination of marked regional or local speech forms And why does French appear to abound in hyperstyle variables which show greater variation on the stylistic than on the social dimension in defiance of a well established theory than such variables should not occur This volume brings together leading variationist sociolinguists and sociologists from both sides of the Channel to ask what makes France exceptional In addressing this question variationists have been forced to reassess the accepted interdisciplinary consensus and to ask as sociolinguistics has come of age whether concepts and definitions have been transposed in a way which meaningfully preserves their original sense and crucially takes account of recent developments in sociology Sociologists for their part have focused on the largely neglected area of language variation and its implications for social theory Their findings therefore transcend the case study of a particularly enigmatic country to raise important theoretical questions for both disciplines
