Student Prior Knowledge

Students should already have knowledge of how to write an argument.

Intended Learning Outcomes

- Students will write an argument to support a specific point of view and will support their arguments with clear information.
- Students will determine the central idea of a text, analyze that idea, find the supporting evidence for it within the text, and evaluate the quality of the evidence.
- Students will determine an author's point of view in an informational text.

Instructional Procedures

1. As a class, read "Should We Still Teach Students to Write in Cursive?". Discuss cursive and manuscript writing with the students. Clear up any questions students have about the article. Then, ask them for their personal experiences with learning to write and for their opinions about this issue.
2. Explain that we will be reading some articles about this topic and analyzing the arguments presented. Students will then write their own arguments about this topic.
3. Hand out "Cursive Slowly Scribbled out of N.J. Curriculums as Computer Skills Gain Value in Schools" Read the article as a class.
4. Hand out the Information Collection Chart. Fill in the column for this article, discussing as you go.
5. Have students get in groups of 2-3. Hand out the rest of the articles listed below and have students work through them together and fill out the rest of the chart. Remind them that the final column should be done individually.
