previously unknown for centuries. Ceasing of Notions is one such text. The text takes a unique form: a dialogue or series of questions and answers between two imaginary figures, master Nyuri and his disciple Emmon, in which the disciple boldly and tenaciously asks follow-up question after follow-up question. And these questions prove to be the reader's very own. Morinaga makes this brilliant and pithy text even more accessible to readers who like the student in the dialogue: have many questions to ask about their own search for the Way of the Buddha and their possible attainment of enlightenment. This volume also includes a generous selection from Morinaga's autobiography. In this very personal, sometimes humorous and ironical reflection, Morinaga Roshi explains why and how, as a young man full of doubt and uncertainty, he chose to devote himself to the Zen monastic practice. In that practice, he did not find immediate enlightenment, but through long hours of meditation, self-inquiry, and the guidance and stimulus of his teacher, Zuigan Roshi, he came to see that he might, after all, let cease his delusive thinking and awaken to Truth.

The Zen Life 禅の生活, 1972      Living and Dying in Zazen Arthur Braverman, 2003-03-01

Living and Dying in Zazen combines the life stories and teaching of five teachers: Kodo Sawaki, Sodo Yokoyama, Kozan Kato, Motoko Ikebe, and Uchiyama, associated with Antaiji monastery, and the story of Braverman and other Western students coming to grips with Zen, Japanese culture, and themselves. The deification of Zen teachers by their followers has been a problematic issue in American Zen; this book provides a healthy antidote, presenting four men and one woman who have lived and died in Zen within the rich context of their personal lives and their culture, so that we can fully understand what makes a Zen master in Japan.
