The background image shows the undercarriage of a vehicle, specifically the area around the transmission. A person's hand, wearing a grey nitrile glove, is visible in the center, pointing towards the transmission mount. The mount is a cylindrical component that connects the transmission to the vehicle's frame. The surrounding area includes various metal components, bolts, and a large, curved metal bracket on the right side. The lighting is focused on the mount area, highlighting the work being performed.
